PREP FIRE

Hello and welcome to the latest issue of VFTT, the first under the new quad-monthly schedule.

I still don't have any finished articles to publish but with the Double One tournament coming up that should fill up a few pages of the next issue. And I have plenty material from the ASL Mailing List that needs turning into articles, but I still need material from you lot.

Nick Carter wrote in to let me know that the SASL material in the last issue came from his web page.

Derek Cox is lucky enough to be able to attend ASLOK this year and wants to know if anyone else is going and maybe meeting up for he trip. If so contact him at asdy34@dsl.pipex.com.

Double 1. My last, best hope for victory.

Pete Phillipps

COVER: The cover to the eagerly awaited Armies of Oblivion module.

THE ASL MAILING LIST

The ASL Mailing List is devoted to discussion of Advanced Squad Leader, and is run by Paul Ferraro via a listserv program at the University of Pittsburgh. To subscribe go to:

EMOTICONS

With the growth of the InterNet, emoticons have originated to allow people to show expressions in text. I find these very useful for the printed word in general, so you'll see plenty of them in View From the Trenches. An emoticon is created with keyboard characters and read with the head tilted to the left. Some typical emotions are: :-) humour or smiley

- :-) humour or smil ;-) winking
- :-> devious smile
- <g> grin
- :-( sad
- :-o shocked or surprised
- #-( hung-over

VIEW FROM THE TRENCHES is the bi-monthly British ASL journal. All comments are welcome. Even better, contribute. Write an article. Design a scenario. Share your ASL experiences with others. VFTT allows you to communicate with other ASLers. Don't be a silent voice.

Issue 68 should be out at the beginning of September 2006.

VFTT costs £2.00 per issue (overseas £4.00), with a year's subscription costing £5.00 (overseas £10.00). Payment should be in pounds sterling, with cheques made out to PETE PHILLIPPS. Readers are reminded to check their address label to see when their subscription ends.

Thursday

Did my usual, and arrived at the hotel first, looks like I am Recce Troop again. After getting my room sorted, I went to the bar, got a non-alcoholic drink (too early for me, but made up for it later), and read a book. After about 1/2 hour, reinforcements turned up, in the shape of Neil Brunger. A bit later, Ian Pollard turned up with his moral support, Chris. Whilst we all sat in Reception, Chris said that her sister, Jan, thought that the Hippy looked cute. Naturally, we being the decent people we are, were not going to let that lie, so the Hippy's name from then on was 'Cutie'. Some of you may of wondered why, so I thought I would tell you. Others started to show up as the afternoon went on, including Shaun Carter, whom I owed a beer (which I bought him). If you did not know, Shaun is involved in the design and playtest of a new module from HOB about Kohima, and I can not wait to see it released (I have a special interest in that area, as my Step-Father served in Burma), and shall buy it. Shaun play-tested the scenarios with his willing victim, Brian Hooper, and so, that took them out of the tourny.

Thursday ended with your hero drinking too much, talking a lot of ASL, and other things, then going to bed.

Friday

Woke up with a mouth like Ghandi's flip-flop, had breakfast, and then went to war.

First battle was against tourney newcomer Phillip Jones, in the Western Front drama 'A37 Dreil Team'. I was the boys from Somerset, naturally. Turn 1, and not a lot happened, just my mtr loses his smoke, and I lost a sqd to a Double-Break. Turn 2, and a 1/2 sqd gets HOB on a morale check, which they promptly Battle-Harden and a Hero shows himself. We have Gusts for the second half of the turn, in which Phil breaks the BMG on his one and only Panther, that with his second Boxcars in a row.

Turn 3, and the Panther crew do their best at wrecking the BMG, and succeed. With a lot of shooting from the SS, I have come to the conclusion that this bunch cannot hit a barndoor at 1 inch with a 105mm howitzer. They also manage to break a LMG. Turn 4, and true to form, Hitler's finest promptly total the broken LMG (they cannot fixed anything, either!). I manage to roll my first Boxcars of the weekend, luckily on a PTC. Two bits of bad luck happen for the West Country boys, first, they somehow manage to total a PIAT, and then, a broken sqd is reduced to a broken 1/2 sqd by the Panther Interdicting them.

Turn 5, and again we get Gusts. This is my finest hour, as at 3 hex range, my boys manage to hit the Panther's frontal armour in a weak spot (I rolled a snakes), and with the TH now doubled to 30, barring a Boxcars, it would kill it. I rolled the cubes, they roll a 9, whew!!, and for the crew, well, they die as well (that will teach them to shoot at my routing guys!). Turn 6, and Phil rolls a Boxcars on a PTC, but when I roll a Boxcars, it is on a MC, to reduce, and ELR, a 458 to a 237, just my luck! The Close-Combat ends with my 247 being victorious, but the other one has my pinned 248 is killed in Ambush by his 467.

Turn 7, and I manage to rally 2x 1/2 sqds. In a shoot, one of my LMGs breaks, and I roll another Boxcars on a MC. A 1/2 sqd that runs for the finish-line does not get there, he dies. My 'good' luck continues with Boxcars, with yet another 1/2 sqd dying on a MC. I offered the towel during this turn, because I have not got enough movement points left. I have decided to shoot that Sniper of mine, as though-out the battle, he did nothing (SAN 3 times, but rolled 5 each time to see if he was awake, he was not!). This makes me 0-1 for the tourny, but I do not mind, I did kill his Panther with a PIAT from the front, how many can say that?

Two things of note; first, it is nice to see 'Berserk' organiser Trevor Edwards back playing ASL again, welcome back Trev (but, where is Steve Thomas?), and secondly, our own book writer, Ian Daglish, sold me a signed copy of his newest book (he could of given me it!). His next one, he tells this writer, will be on Operation Epsom, again in Normandy.

The second battle of this years event, was set in 1945, with me playing Hitler's finest in 'SP96 Husum Hotfoot'. The advancing British were played by Paul Legg. On Turn 1, nothing of any importance happened, but Turn 2, and one of the Wasps rolls a Double One, thank God you can not get a CH with one of those things, but wastes it. In the first Close Combat of the game, my Pinned 237 Ambushes 2x 457s (each with a LMG), and kills one of them.

Turn 3, and a bloody Wasp Preps at my guys in a wood (12+1, due to hinderance), DR of 3 = 3MC, so my guys promptly break and ELR. I manage to roll another of my Boxcars on a Morale Check, to make a SS 447 into a broken SS 237. At last I have a sniper, who breaks one of Paul's squads. I lose two 1/2 sqds in the CCPh, one was ambushed in CC, the other was the guys in the melee from last turn to a snakes. My mortar hits one of his Comets five times, but has no effect at all, what a waste! Paul rolls a snakes on a MC and Battle-Hardens plus creates a bloody Hero, but loses the broken 1/2 sqd with them (that will teach them). The Comet on the west flank shoots at my guys in S9, hits them, but to no effect, then he Intensive Fires at them, and misses.

Turn 4, and my sniper is awake again, as he stuns the east Wasp. The east Comet does the dirty, and KIAs one of my SS 447s. When a 457 makes a dash across the road, my HMG kills the sod, and retains ROF (I knew I would get my own back). Another 457 makes a dash across another road, only to get clobbered by my MMG combo, changing it to a broken 247. Paul's Mr Fanatic is not that good, as he wets his pants when my HMG combo shoot at him. Another one of my 1/2 sqds goes down in CC.

Turn 5, and a 247 dies in the RPh (can not remember which side, there is a war going on, you know!). The west Wasp toasts my MMG combo, rolling a snakes, I should think so! An 8-0 Ldr dies in CC, again, can not remember which side, what with so much fighting going on. Now the following was becoming quite common by now, another 1/ 2 sqd SURRENDERS, the yellow-bellied cowards. Turn 6, and with Husum mainly in British hands, I do my best to salvage something from this mess. With my Mtr crew leaving their mortar and making a dash for the victory area, they end up in a wood. They are then attacked by the east Comet, who goes into bypass of their woods. The crew promptly find a Panzerfaust, and burn the thing, creating smoke in their hex. My HMG combo does wonders, breaking a Ldr and ELRing a 1/2 sqd, but HOBing another 1/2 sqd. One of them 1/2 sqds dies. Eventually, my HMG guys break. Paul then turns his attention to the crew. This crew survive the fire placed on it, and when Paul fired the Wasps Flame-Thrower, laughed when it rolled a Boxcars. My win, as I had a GO MMC in the Victory area. PHEW!! This makes me 1-1 in the tourny. Unusual thing today, no booze consumed by me!!!!

Saturday

After breakfast, and I ready myself for round 3 of the tourny. This is against Steve Cook in 'SP130 The Tiger's Whiskers', with me as the Russians (or, to use the correct word, Soviets), now that the PC crowd are happy, we shall continue. The only thing that happened on Turn 1, was that my 3/4 inch dummies were exposed as fakes. So, on to Turn 2, and my T34 'D' loses this APCR, but still manages to kill a PzIV with normal ammo just before it tried to cross the bridge. My 57LL loses APCR (I shall have to have a word with that supply officer next time I can kill the git!), but, as with the T34, it kills it's target, a Tiger, with a shot up the rear end. In my PFPh, the same 57LL (not hard, theres only one) shots at a M/C, TH DR 3, less then half, so a CH, effect DR 4 = 3MC. Breaks

Turn 4, and a Tiger goes driving in the woods today, and bogs, but does manage to burn a KV-1S I had stationed next to the woods in the hope of catching the unwary, some hope! The 45LL crew are attacked, and they break. When they try to surrender, those Hitlerite pigs murder them, so I tell the rest of my boys, not to surrender to those pigs, but to fight and, if necessary, die for Mother Russia. The troops that were in Melee, go and get themselves killed. The concealed guys run in the open for some unknown reason, and are turned into consripts (the only good thing is that now I can play with Conscripts). Turn 5, and that blasted (I wished it was) Tiger manages to unbog itself. Steve then drives a Sd250 off the board, and I stop the game. I then count up the amount of points he can get off, way more than he needs too, so I give the field to him. This makes me 1-2 for the tourny, but hey, I have killed 4 tanks so far, I do not mind.

Game 4, and we find ourselves out in the Far East. The Burmese jungle to be exact. This little round of 3 scenarios feature those guys from Nepal, whom I have a great respect for, the Gurhkas. My opponent for this round is a South African serving in the British Army as an Officer, Ivor Gardiner. I get the Sons of Nippon, in the scenario 'SP95 Burn Gurkha Burn'. Turn 1, and the start of the 'Too Hot To Handle' Flame Thrower for me, yep, my FT toting 1/2 sqd dies. I get a sort of revenge, by killing one of his sqds with one of mine in Final Fire. Ivor does his best chicken act, and declines CC.

Turn 2, and a 1/2 sqd (237) HOB, get the usual for the Japs, berserk, but, with no Brits in sight, it goes and decides to be Elite (238). Both of my mortars get smoke, but one brings enough for just this round, stupid sods. I lose a 238 1/2 sqd on a Boxcars MC. My left wing Reduced sqd makes a grab for the FT, then dies. The Ldr then grabs the FT, and dies (see what I mean, 'Too Hot To Handle' FT, wretched thing!). I then create a DC-Hero (this is 'Heroes', after all), and he makes it to one hex short of the target hex. then gets killed. 9-1/448 Banzai towards his HMG combo, surviving numerous 1MCs. The HMG then fires at them using FPF in their hex, and promptly breaks. I massacre his cowards. I loses a Reduced sqd in HtH. One of my sqds reduces to a 1/2 sqd, then goes and breaks.

Turn 3, and lo-and-behold, we have Gusts, thats my smoke gone. The fatal flaw with Jap Ldrs rallying their blokes comes home to haunt me, when a 1/2 sqd rolls an 11, and is Cas-Red, ie. dies. A broken 458 routs in the open, and is interdicted down to a 248. Two of my sqds die in CC against one of his. Now my HMG/MMG open fire for the first time, and roll Boxcars, the Random Selection dice are just as bad, two blinking 6s, flipping typical! The last Brits on Hill 526 die, one down, two to go.

Turn 4, and the wind DR is Snakes, but still no wind, this light jungle is getting a bit stifling. I lose a 1/2 sqd whilst crossing the bridge, and my last DC bloke dies. Ivor breaks his MMG on Hill 507. the other MMG snakes my guys crossing the bridge. I Boxcars my LMG, whilst my mortar shoots at the 9-1/MMG(brkn), and breaks the 9-1 (glad to see the Ldr is like the MMG). Turn 5, and I break a mortar trying for WP. My 9-1/448 Banzai team die one hex from their target, in a 8-2 PB attack, DR 3 = 2KIA, what a flipping shame. At this point I concide, my Japs have not got enough blokes to complete the job. This makes me 1-3 in the tourny, but no tanks killed in this game, there was not any.

During the evening, before 'Cutie' went on the pull, it was decided that 'Cutie' and me would play each other, as we have not played for a few years.

for food) I prepared to faced down 'Cutie' (God, he is ugly!!!). This game was played in our usual way, who-careswho-wins-as-long-as-theresbeer-afterwards, the way it should be played.

The scenario of choice is a fairly short one, SP118 'Seizing The Sittang Bridge', with me taking the Sons of Nippon again. Turn 1, and I lose a 1/2 sqd whilst it does 1/2 sqd things. I also lose one of those tin cans they laughingly call an Armoured Car, to a LMG no less, and the result is a burning wreck (rolled a snakes for the effect!).

Turn 2, and in the first Banzai of the game, Pete manages to cower three of his guys, the target then fired FPF, but to no effect, now it is 'punch-up time' or them. The Chinese mortar rolls a CH on my last A/C, but it is a wasted round. The mortar eventually kills the A/C, and the crew die as well. Banzai CC, and I lose a 1/2 sqd, so now it is a 1-1 minus 1 for me. The other CC carries on with abysmal DRs on both sides.

Turn 3, Pete fires on my 447/LMG, I roll a snakes on the resultant MC, and the 447 goes berserk, but only just. There are four CCs in progress in my part of the turn, so each in order as follows:- 1/ 348/DC and 237/mtr Ambush and kill a Chinese 337. 2/ 448 vs. 337, both die. 3/ 10-1 and 238 vs. 337, both die. And 4/ my berserk guy kills the moron who made him berserk in the first place. The Chinese 8-0 Ldr rallies, and the grunts with him feel ashamed, so they rally as well. Turn 4, and my advance starts, a bit late as it turns out.With every-one advancing, Pete retreats.

Turn 5, and a HOB on a Chinese 447 makes him go Fanatic. My Ldr/MMG/MMG stack move from 17CC3 to 40Z8 ready for the final push. I create a DC Hero, and with 8MF, he has enough to reach the Chinese bridge defence, but gets himself wounded, cutting his MF to 3. The Engineer squad he came from then charges, and dies next to the 9-1/MMG (bridge defence), and a 1/2 sqd goes and breaks next to them. My two crews both reduce, and a 348 dies in CC. The Chinese Fanatic guy goes and breaks, so much for being Fanatic! Pete moves a lot of his blokes to be next to the bridge defenders (they love each other). Turn 6, and I have totally no luck with my Prep Fire. The wounded DC Hero dies in a hail of gunfire, and with his death, I withdraw from the field (give-in, but hey, got to make it sound good, aint D.

That makes me 1-4 for the tourny, which is about my usual level. As I said earlier, at least I killed 4 tanks, one of them with a PIAT Critical Hit shot through the frontal armour of a Panther, the only way to do it through the front, old chap. And most of all, I enjoyed all my games, which is the whole idea, I think!

Now, with any game of ASL, there is a few rule errors. So, here are some of the ones in my games:- 1/ In game 1 (GT 4), we forgot that the PIAT did not 'X' on a DR of 11, but was only broken, and could be fixed. 2/ In game 2 (GT 6), my HMG fired too many times, no ROF in the AFPh, just got carried away with it all, old chap. 3/ In game 3 (GT 2), when I killed the Tiger with my 57LL, it should of missed. You can not Bore-Sight any hex when your opponent starts with any troops on board. 4/ In game 4 (GT 4), Ivor, my opponent, forgot that units on Level 2 hills with a Level 2 obstacle between them, can still see each other. As with all errors, A.2 old boy! And, just a reminder when you play the Japanese in any 'Schwerpunkt' scenario when they are attacking, you must move quickly, I did not!

Martin Vicca, Ian Percy, Steve Cook and Tony Gibson were forced to leave prior to round 5 on Sunday morning due to bad weather.

During my last game, we had to stop for a few minutes to give out the prizes. No need to guess who came first, yep, Mr ASL in the UK, Toby Pilling, choosing the figurine with two Japanese soldiers on it. In second place, the long-time-no-see original organiser (minus his co-organiser, Steve Thomas) of Blackpool ASL, Trevor Edwards, choosing the figurine of a Yank MP. In last place, came relative newcomer Chris Walton, getting a scenario pack (Friendly Fire 1, I think). Now for the decent prizes, Snakes and Boxcars (I was in with a chance of the last one), both of which were won by Paul Legg, getting 13 snakes and 9 boxcars in the same game, which he still lost! This is the best prize because, instead of trophies, you get money. With £2 for snakes and £12 for boxcars, thats £14 Paul walked away with, and he nearly won the last prize, as well!

Now, this is going to be of interest to you lot, Toby anounced that he has now retired from competative ASL (his mantle piece was complaining about the weight of all his trophies), so that means that all you lot who have come second, behind him, now can not blame Toby for not winning first place!

For something totally different, I asked two newbies what they did not like about the event, and both Phillip Jones and his mate, Jaz, both said that they enjoyed it very much. The only thing that they said could improve was the choice of some of the scenarios. This is a very dificult thing to do, as in any tournament, people will always have a complaint about this. I believe that no matter what Derek Tocher does, he will always lose on this matter, that is why you are provided with three to choose from. I can not see how it can be done any other way. Plus, each year, Derek has to provide different scenarios, otherwise 'Heroes' and 'Intensive Fire' would become very boring, something that this writer would not enjoy. If you have any suggestions, drop Derek a line. You never know, your suggestion might appear in a tourny. But do not be upset if it does not.

After our game, 'Cutie' and me did our usual, and went to the Pub to watch the Football. Nigel Blair and Ian Pollard joined us, but they watched the Rugby, which England lost, as the French had an extra player, the ref! Both Manchester United and Arsenal won their matches, with Arsenal's being the sweetest, what with Liverpool fans sitting next to us, YES!!! Then it was off to another pub for a meal. All in all, a very good weekend. See you all in Bournemouth in October.

Next years 'Heroes' has already been booked for the same place, same weekend, so get the time off work/cleared with the missus etc. sorted out, and get yourselves to Blackpool.

PS – In case you are wondering, the title of this piece came about because it snowed on Saturday night, hence Winter Warfare (if it coincides with any other tourny title, HARD LUCK!). (I preferred It Never Snows In March, to mis-quote the title of a book about another heroic British effort in World War 2 – Pete)

LOST AT HEROES 06

Somebody left behind their copy of the ABTF map, the German MMC countersheet and Chapter F (including divider). Let me know who you are and I'll post them back to you (or return them to you at IN-TENSIVE FIRE if you want.

Steve Cook also lost his copy of board 42 so if someone has it please let me know and I'll pass your details on to him - Pete.

HEROES! 2006 Update Toby Wins Third HEROES Tournament

Derek Tocher

Early March saw just over two dozen *ASL*ers congregate in Blackpool for the third HEROES tournament to date. After three days on intensive play Toby Pilling once again emerged as the winner of the 'northern' ASL tournament winning a trophy featuring two Japanese infantry figures.

HEROES 2006 was the 21st British ASL tournament and there are now 2250 results recorded on the ladder. Remarkably there are three players who have attended every event so far; Ian Daglish, Dominic McGrath and Pete Phillipps. There are many others however who have attended a large number of events and the ladder logs show that no fewer than 23 others have been at ten or more of the tournaments. The largest number of games played over the last ten years have been racked up by Dave Schofield (123), closely followed by Brian Hooper (117). The top 10% of players have ratings of 3280+ while the upper quartile are rated 3160+. Those in the lower quartile have ratings below 2810 while the bottom 10% of participants are rated 2665 or less. These numbers have remained essentially invariant over the last six years and the distribution of results is essentially Gaussian about 3000.

Despite Toby's win he only picked up 25 points for his 5-0 performance. Nevertheless his total is now a pretty unassailable 4085 pts. However rumour has it that he is beginning to find the stress on maintaining his winning streak and may retire from tournament play in the near future. The two big winners over the weekend however were Nigel Blair (+350 pts) and Michael Davies (+230 pts). Nigel's win moved him from the almost the foot of the ladder after INTEN-SIVE FIRE 05 to 199th. However he still has some way to go to reverse the 535 pt loss he suffered at INTENSIVE FIRE back in October. At the same time Michael's 3-2 record gained him 75 places to put him mid-table (107th). Just as there were big winners there were of course big losers during the weekend, most notably Chris Walton, who lost all five games and with them 390 points, dropping him from mid-table to 221st. The other big loser over the weekend was Ian Pollard who lost 240 points and slipped more than fifty places.

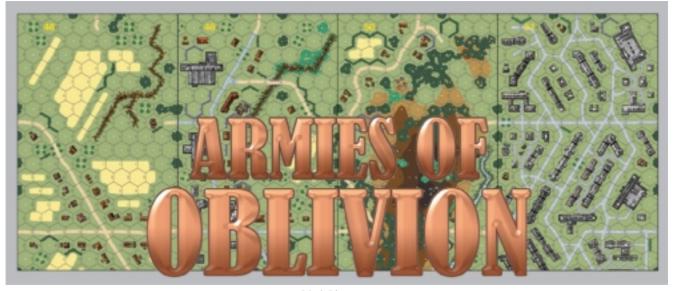

Without more ado here is the ladder as of 1st April 2006.

Attendees at the recent Winter Offensive 2006, an Advanced Squad Leader (ASL) convention held in Maryland, were able to purchase a new ASL module, Armies of Oblivion, the first "core" module released in seven years, featuring the armed forces of the various minor Axis countries (except Finland). Since February, pre-ordered copies of this module have been arriving in mailboxes and on store shelves around the world, and will soon be available for direct order from the publisher, Multi-Man Publishing.

Therein lies a story worth telling. Readers not interested in the history and context of Armies of Oblivion can skip straight to the meat of the review, but to truly appreciate AOO, one should know something of its history.

A digression may be in order here.

In 1967, noted science fiction writer Harlan Ellison edited and published an anthology titled Dangerous Visions, featuring the work of many writers. It was a tremendous critical and popular success, leading Ellison to publish a much larger sequel, Again, Dangerous Visions. The sequel, too, was popular. Ellison conceived of a grand finale, a third anthology far larger than the first two. This book, Last Dangerous Visions, was announced in 1971 and eagerly anticipated.

Yet Ellison had bitten off more than he could chew. Assembling, editing and writing lengthy introductions for so many dozens of stories was an Herculean chore. Perhaps understandably, Ellison put off Lost to work on other projects. In the meantime, he bought more stories for it dozens and dozens. But this just made the project larger still, leading to another delay. Throughout the 1970s and beyond, announcements regularly appeared of Lost's imminent release—a release that never actually appeared.

It became increasingly obvious that Lost was unlikely ever to be completed. Indeed, as the years passed, an increasing number of contributors dropped dead. In 1994, a book was even published that detailed the saga of Lost and explained why it was unlikely ever to be published. That was twelve years ago. It remains unpublished to this day, vaporware before the term was even in-

Why do I mention a science fiction anthology in the context of board wargaming? The reason is that until its publication in the winter of 2006, Armies of Oblivion was the Lost Dangerous Visions of the wargaming world. No other board wargame had been anticipated for so long by so many. There were contenders for the crown, but it was AOO whose non-arrival caused most anguish among expectant fans.

AOO was just too big a project. Even after the Allied minor forces and the Finns had been extracted from it, to appear on other modules, it was a large project with many complicated scenarios to playtest, thousands of counter to lay out, and a lot of research to be done on an obscure subject. More importantly, throughout its history, AOO never seemed to have a "champion." There was no one person heading the project from start to finish; instead, the project was successively handed off or parted out to a variety of people. It became the ugly stepchild of ASL.

Thus it is perhaps not surprising that AOO would repeatedly be set aside, first by Avalon Hill then by MMP, for some project more interesting to those in charge. From its position at the back of the bus, AOO saw any number of historical ASL modules, new editions of older ASL modules, and other ASL projects such as Solitaire ASL and Action Packs exit first, not to mention a wideranging variety of non-ASL wargames.

In the meantime, ASL fans became more and more agitated for the "Green Meanies," as many termed them, to arrive. Repeated broken promises about its imminence did little to satisfy the hungry hordes, around 2,000 of whom had actually pre-ordered the game in advance, not knowing it would actually still be several years before it actually appeared (causing no end of expired credit card problems).

The situation became so bad that some people announced they would not buy any MMP products until AOO finally came out, while others were so tired of waiting they perversely announced that it didn't matter if the module ever appeared. "Who cares about crappy Axis minor tanks?" they asked cynically. Finally, in 2005, there were signs that the module (some parts of which, such as the scenarios, had actually been designed over a decade earlier) was actually nearing completion. Many ASLers actually became apprehensive at this point—and probably some MMP staff did, too—that the wait for the module had been so terribly long, that expectations had been so terrendously built up by the wait, that AOO could never actually fulfill those expectations and the only result of the final release of AOO would be a collective sigh of disappointment.

And then, in Bowie, Maryland, in 2006, a decade and a half after it was announced, Armies of Oblivion actually appeared, in the flesh, so to speak. Winter Offensive convention attendees looked at it with the same sort of awed reverence that many must give to the Shroud of Turin. Was that it? Is it really here? Can it be true?

It was true. Armies of Oblivion had arrived.

Pinch Me, I Must Be Dreaming

As if to emphasize its physical reality, AOO shows up in a heavy grey box featuring tired Hungarian honveds trudging along a column of vehicles. It is the sort of box that just demands to be opened up and inspected.

Maps

Somewhat confusingly, there were actually three different versions of AOO assembled. The differences in the three versions center around the maps. The original AOO mounted mapboards were actually printed many years ago and made available for sale independently by MMP. Over the years, many ASLers purchased those maps and thus had no need or desire to purchase them all over again when AOO finally came out. So MMP thoughtfully allowed people to pre-order a less expensive version of AOO that came without any maps. Except perhaps on the resale market, no one need worry that their version of AOO is mapless, because those copies were only available to people who had specifically pre-ordered them.

So many people, however, had pre-ordered the version with maps that MMP found itself in a bit of a dilemma. The rapidly growing costs involved with producing mounted maps had recently caused MMP to shift to a "semi-mounted" style of mapboard. Instead of the maps being printed onto paper, then glued onto thick cardboard, they would print the maps directly onto a sheet of lighter cardboard. The maps in the two (to date) ASL Starter Kits, as well as the 3rd edition of Beyond Valor, all use this "new style" of mapboard. The new style maps are actually quite nice, being considerably more sturdy than unmounted maps, which are still the standard in board wargaming. But MMP did not have enough "old style" maps to fill the entire print run of AOO.

Consequently, MMP decided to limit the "old style" maps to pre-orders. People buying after the pre-order period was up would get AOO with the "new style" maps. Thus someone who did not pre-order AOO and wanted to buy it right now would have to purchase the "new style" map version, unless they were able to find a retail store or Web seller who had pre-ordered copies of the "old style" map version. Supposedly the games have stickers to let people know which version they are looking at. Confusing? Perhaps, but MMP handled the whole thing in a very customerfriendly way.

AOO thus comes with four mounted or semi-mounted mapboards, depending on what version one has. The maps themselves are very attractive. Board 48 depicts a small crossroads village, which was badly needed. Board 49 represents the outskirts of an urban, perhaps industrial area. Board 50 depicts two large, somewhat wooded hills; the tough terrain and small number of buildings also makes it suitable for PTO scenarios. Board 51 covers a densely built-up city center area, with massive stone buildings that one might find in the center of Vienna or Prague.

In addition to the mapboards, there are three sheets of map overlays, which can be cut out and placed on top of different maps to create more varied terrain. These are not likely to particularly excite many ASL players, but will be of immense use to ASL scenario designers, who are always stretched in terms of the available map resources at their disposal. Two of the overlay sheets have useful hill and woods overlays, but the third sheet is the one that will be most exciting to scenario designers-it is a full-length overlay of a river, allowing designers to turn virtually any mapboard into a river board, or to place rivers at map angles previously not allowed by the system. This is a great gift to scenario designers, who certainly will take advantage of the flexibility it allows to create some attractive scenarios in years to come.

Counters

AOO comes with six full countersheets. Two countersheets are  $\frac{1}{2}$ " infantry counters, while there are four full sheets of  $\frac{5}{8}$ " vehicle and ordnance counters, for a total of 1,264 counters. One infantry countersheet duplicates the Axis Minor infantry who first appeared in the module Partisan. It also includes some fresh additions, such as some higher powered squads to represent late war Romanian and Bulgarian troops armed with Soviet submachineguns.

The second countersheet provides a second set of infantry, green in color with a German blue border, to represent Hungarians, since Hungarians and Romanians fought with each other during the period 1944-45. Both countersheets have the slightly larger unit depiction and typeface that MMP adopted recently, which makes these counters more attractive than their Partisan counterparts of years ago.

Most of the counters represent the vehicles and ordnance of the Romanian, Hungarian, Slovakian and Croatian troops that fought on the Axis side during World War II. These range wildly in quality from World War I era French FT-17 tanks to the Panthers and Tigers that served in Hungarian service. One of the most interesting aspects of the Axis minor forces is how tremendously varied and unusual their armament was.

Accompanying the counters is a new Chapter H section explaining the attributes of the vehicles and guns. Of course, as ASL aficionados know, Chapter H is far more than that; it is an incredibly rich source of detailed information about the manufacture and usage of fighting vehicles and ordnance in World War II. Were the complete Chapter H published independently as a book, it would sell well to World War II armor buffs. Certainly these new pages, depicting the Axis minor vehicles, are an intriguing addition. The only absence that I can see is that the vehicles given by the Germans to their puppet Serbian and Slovenian forces are not mentioned.

Rules

In addition to the new Chapter H rules, AOO includes a variety of replacement pages for the existing rules—the first such pages to appear in many years. These replacement pages add the new infantry counters to Chapter A (infantry rules) and the Axis minor forces to Chapter S (solitaire rules). Additionally, they contain Chapter A and Chapter D (vehicle rules) replacement pages introducing a major and much-needed rules change designed to eliminate certain abuses of the vehicular platoon movement rules. New Solitaire ASL charts are also included.

Scenarios

For many ASLers, AOO is not as important for the scenarios that it contains as it is for the rules, counters, and mapsheets, which will allow hundreds of new scenarios to be designed in the coming years and months (already one third party scenario pack featuring Axis minor forces has been published and more products are on the way).

Still, most people's first impressions of AOO will be from playing one of the 11 scenarios (the box bottom mistakenly says 12 in one location) that come with the game. These scenarios are fascinating in the same way that a time capsule or the movie Jurassic Park may be fascinating. Designed in the early 1990s, they definitely represent a blast from the past in terms of scenario design, which over the past ten years has progressively evolved from predominantly massive, lengthy scenarios to predominantly leaner, faster-playing scenarios. More than anything else, this evolution is due to the popularity of tournament play, which dictates relatively small scenarios, and to the decreasing amount of time on people's hands as they deal with family and work.

The scenarios of AOO, though, would fit well alongside the oldest ASL scenarios in modules such as Beyond Valor and Yank. They are large and long; the smallest among them is still medium-sized. Because they are so large, many of them will get relatively limited play, but that does not mean they are of low quality. Most of the scenarios in AOO were designed by Brian Martuzas, with veteran scenario designers Pete Shelling, Kenn Dunn, and Paul Kenny each contributing one each.

Taken collectively, the scenarios are an interesting and eclectic mix. What is noticeably absent from them are low quality Axis-minor troops. While elite and first-line troops appear in every scenario, conscript Axis minor squads are nowhere to be seen. The module is also missing any scenarios depicting Croatian troops. All three of the scenarios I played were quite enjoyable, and several of the others look interesting to me as well. Given the large size of so many of the included scenarios, however, and taking into account my limited time, it is quite possible that much of the use I get out of AOO in the next few years will come from future scenarios that use these counters and maps.

Scenario Notes

So far I have played three of the 11 scenarios in AOO and enjoyed all three (thanks go to my esteemed opponents Carl Nogueira, Stan Jackson, and Craig Hornish). Impressions on these scenarios and capsule descriptions of all of them follow:

Scenario 111 - Balkan Sideshow

This meaty scenario depicts a very rare occurrence-an action from the invasion of Yugoslavia in 1941. That campaign was over so quickly, as the Yugoslav army collapsed, that it has not provided the grist for many scenarios. A full 10 turns long, it features the Yugoslavs defending a bridge from attacking Hungarians. Eight Yugoslav squads, aided by pillboxes, barbed wire, mines, and machine guns, set up on the far side of the river, while 10 more Yugoslav squads enter the game area retreating in front of the Hungarians, trying to slow them down. The Hungarians feature 14 cavalry squads, seven AFVs, two trucks towing artillery pieces, and eight squads of assault engineers (complete with a flamethrower and a demolition charge). This was one of the scenarios I played (as the Yugoslavs). The Hungarians have overwhelming force, but they must cross a river, and there are only two ways to do it: directly across a bridge which is likely to be heavily defended, or using their cavalry to swim across the river, which is both time-consuming and dangerous. The Yugoslavs have a fragile, brittle force, which will hurt them in the end game, as their troops lower in quality and strength. They must take every measure to conserve their forces for the end game, since the scenario is so long, and must inflict maximum casualties on the Hungarian forces to ensure that the final Hungarian assault is too weak to succeed. I won this scenario as the Yugoslavs but I don't think they have any edge.

Scenario 112 - Out of Cowardice

Another Yugoslavia 1941 action, this 6turn scenario, featuring Hungarians attacking the Yugoslav Army, is one of the smallest in the module, so should be popular. The Hungarians have 11 squads and three AFVs, while the Yugoslavs defend with nine very poor squads and a random number of partisan squads representing armed civilians. Depending on the die roll, then, the Yugoslav force may range from 11 total squads to as many as 16 total squads. The Hungarian victory conditions (taking a certain number of buildings) are adjusted based on this die roll as well. However, at first glance, I would rather have a lot of partisans and tougher victory conditions as the Yugoslavs than the reverse, just because the rest of my troops are so poor and unreliable.

Scenario 113 - Liberating Bessarabia

The summary of 1941 is the scene for this 8-turn scenario, is one the smallest scenarios in the whole module, featuring 14 Romanian squads and six tanks attacking 11 poor quality Soviet squads and four poor quality tanks. Because of its size, this is likely to be one of the most played

Scenario 114 - Cautious Crusaders

This 9-turn scenario features Soviets and Slovaks fighting each other in the Ukraine in the summer of 1941. Accompanied by 8 vehicles, 20 Slovak squads (some on bicycles) must wrest a coterie of multi-hex buildings from 25 Soviet squads and two light anti-tank guns. Both sides have a little off-board artillery as well. Although the Slovaks have elite squads, their work is cut out for them, as the Soviets outnumber them and have reasonable troop quality. The Slovaks must get the maximum utility from their Czech-made tanks.

Scenario 115 - Huns of Steel

This unfortunately named scenario is another East Front scenario, featuring Hungarians on the attack against Soviets in the summer of 1942. Nine turns long, this scenario features 20 first line and elite Hungarian squads (riding horses and motorcycles), accompanied by 16 AFVs (half of them Panzer Mk IVs) attacking 18 Soviet squads, heavily armed, who are assisted by an artillery piece, a lot of barbed wire, and nine AFVs, including Lend-Lease Valentine and Stuart tanks.

Scenario 116 - The Sixth Blow

This is a late-war 8 <sup>1</sup>/<sub>2</sub>-turn scenario featuring horses upon horses—Soviet horses, German horses, and Hungarian horses. The scenario is complex, but basically it is a fighting withdrawal on the part of the Soviets (which is somewhat strange, as the scenario's historical description, devoid of tactical detail, depicts a Soviet attack). The Soviets have 8 partisan squads, 12 cavalry squads, and 6 infantry squads, along with 8 AFVs. The Hungarians have 11 cavalry squads, an armored car, and a couple of artillery pieces. The Germans have 6 infantry squads, 6 cavalry squads, and 7 AFVs (including two Panthers). The Russians get air support and off-board rocket artillery.

Scenario 117 – With Tigers on their Tail

This 11-turn behemoth of a scenario features late war action between the Hungarians and Soviets in the Carpathian mountains in the summer of 1944. In this action, the Soviets are on the attack against a Hungarian delaying force. To win, the Hungarians, who enter the scenario from the north edge of the map, must exit at least 30 victory points worth of units off the south edge of the map, while making sure that the Soviets exit less. To accomplish this feat, they have 18 elite and first-line squads, well armed, and 10 AFVs, which include two Tiger tanks thoughtfully given to them by the Germans. The Soviets have 22 squads, lightly armed, and nearly as many (21) AFVs. These include 12 T-34s. With so many of the vehicles easily able to kill each other, this looks to be a very bloody scenario. Both sides start the scenario with far, far more than 30 victory points, so it is clear that no matter how many exit, the map will be a bloody graveyard afterwards.

Scenario 118 - Downsizing the Uprising

This scenario represents an action from the obscure but fascinating Slovak Uprising of 1944, much less well known than the concurrent Warsaw Uprising, but equally unsuccessful. As the Soviet Army reached the Carpathians, segments of the puppet Slovak Army conspired with pro-Communist Slovak partisans to launch a sudden uprising in the rear of the German front lines. Unfortunately for them, they were poorly organized and only a portion of the Slovak Army joined the uprising; meanwhile, the exhausted Soviets could not break through the German positions in the Carpathians. Scratch German forces slowly strangled, then destroyed, the Uprising within a couple of months. This scenario represents a rare Slovak attack during the Uprising. With 32 squads (12 of them partisans) and three tanks, they must wrest control of a handful of buildings from 20 German squads of mediocre quality, supported by a couple of artillery pieces. They have nine turns in which to do it. This is one of the scenarios I played; I was the defending Germans. I felt stretched very thin, as I had to defend several widely spaced buildings, and did not many troops with which to do it. I wanted to play for time, but with nine turns, the Slovaks don't have to rush too much. They do have three distinct disadvantages, however. First, the Germans know where the Slovaks have to go; there is no mystery there, so they can make sure they have key buildings well defended. Second, the main Slovak force must cross a lot of open ground (or take a very long way around), and will definitely take casualties. Third, the Slovak partisans are unfortunately a very weak force; even though they have 12 squads, they will be shooting from poor cover at Germans with strong cover, and because they cannot firegroup in multiple hexes, their fire attacks will be weak. As it turned out, the partisans caused me no worries at all and I could concentrate most of my efforts on stopping the other Slovak force-which I did, eking out a victory. However, the scenario seemed balanced and fun.

Scenario 119 - Ancient Feud

The Hungarians and Romanians square off against each other in this eight-turn October 1944 scenario. The Romanians are on the attack, leading off with 14 first line squads, two artillery pieces, and two tanks; they are later reinforced by five more AFVs, plsu five halftracks carrying five squads. The Hungarians, however, are no slouch, with 14 elite and first line squads, extremely heavily armed, two anti-tank guns, and nine AFVs. To win, the Romanians must control ten or more stone buildings on the center mapboard. If I had to pick a side, I'd pick the Hungarians.

Scenario 120 - Return to Sender

For anybody who ever wanted to play the Bulgarians in World War II, here is their opportunity. This large, 10-turn scenario features Bulgarians on the attack against Germans after they turned on their erstwhile allies in order to avoid fighting the Soviets. A trio of 88mm AA guns anchor the German defense; they also have two light AA guns and 14 heavily armed elite squads with which to protect themselves. The Bulgarians can throw against them 30 squads, reasonably well armed themselves, and nine AFVs (six of them Panzer Mk IVs). To sweeten the deal, the Bulgarians also get some off-board artillery and two fighter-bombers. It looks big and bloody.

Scenario 121 - End Station Budapest

The encircled city of Budapest is the scene of this January 1945 scenario featuring Romanian troops, now allied with the Soviets, attacking Hungarian defenders. A lengthy 10 turns, this scenario centers around one key building which the Hungarians control and the Romanians want. To take it, they have 36 (!) elite and first line squads (including some Assault Engineers who have a flamethrower and two demolition charges) and two anti-tank guns. They also have some Panzerfausts. The Hungarian defenders have 18 elite and first line squads, heavily armed, assisted by three relatively light-skinned AFVs. Covering only two urban mapboards, having over 50 total squads, and featuring victory conditions which demand the control of one building, this scenario is likely to have a very high counter density. To me, this is one of the less attractive scenarios featured in the pack and I can't imagine myself playing it.

Conclusion

I expected to be disappointed when AOO finally arrived. I had been waiting for it for so long that I felt it could not possibly live up to my expectations. I was delighted to discover that actually AOO is a high quality product in every regard. Though it took forever and a day to finish, there is no doubt that AOO is a box full of goodies. In no way was I dissatisfied with any aspect of AOO (although I would have liked some smaller scenarios). The module is bigger and better than the previous core module, Doomed Battalions. It is a quality product and this reviewer highly recommends it. No ASLer can afford to let this one pass by.

A Request For Playtesting

Shaun Carter

Guys, in this issue there are two draft scenarios for your consideration.

Pete is always asking for new material and I am always designing scenarios, but not always playtesting them. I am fortunate in having had some scenarios published in the past in various quarters. I have a reputation for Historical accuracy but not always a good game design and this is where you can make a difference to the final product. This is a request for your help to get these ideas converted into playable games. For this I need you to play these twice, once each side with a completed playtest report form which is printed in this issue and is also available on the VFTT website.

Can you please send them to me at shaun.carter2@btinternet.com. I will read and consider your comments but I cannot promise that I will always act on them. It is a major part of the creative process absorbing and applying feedback. If these are well received we want to make this a regular feature in VFTT.

Expect mainly Briitsh material from all theatres of war covering odd situations, seldom used counters and sometimes ideas. Go on, give it a try you never know you might like them!

The British 3-inch Mortar

The scenario 'Vx1 Charge You Bastards' contains the following SSR:

The Calibre Size (C2.21) of the British OML 3-in mortar (British Ordnance Note 2) is considered to be 81mm not 76mm and thus should be resolved on the 8FP column of the IFT or the 80mm+ column of the HE TK Table.

The reason for this SSR is that while researching the Chapter H notes for the forthcoming Korean War module it was discovered that the calibre of the British OML 3-in mortar was actually 3.2", not 3". Indeed during World War 2 the British eventually provided a special, more pointed, firing pin to allow the mortar to fire captured Italian and German 81mm mortar ammunition. Comparisons of the explosive filling of the World War Two ammunition for the 3-inch mortar with that of other nations' mortars indicates that (while the range might have been unimpressive) the British rounds were as lethal as any.

Until revised counters are issued it is suggested that the following SSR should be used in any scenario involving the British OML 3-in mortar:

The Calibre Size (C2.21) of the British OML 3-in mortar (British Ordnance Note 2, British Vehicle Note 67 and 71, Chinese Ordnance Note ??) is considered to be 81mm not 76mm and thus should be resolved on the 8FP column of the IFT or the 80mm+ column of the HE TK Table. Any 70mm+ OBA should be treated as 80mm+ OBA.

AN AMERICAN DECISION IN LA GLEIZE

Some Notes On American Play For KGP CG III

Another article taken from an ASLML discussion from days of yore. Chris Fleury is listed as one of the main contributors but I'm sure others were involved too. As usual though any cock-ups are my fault (especially as I haven't played the CG!) – Pete

Despite the VC, realistically KGP III can only be won by Controlling all the LVP Locations - you can't win by cumulative LVP Points. To Win by LVP Points you have to get (and hold) LVP Locations early, but too few Americans fighting too many Germans this is unlikely to happen. Typically most of the Americans are wiped out in senseless frontal attacks on superior, outnumbering German defences. With nothing to do but watch the German drive him off the map; the US quits (and says it's a dog CG). KGP is all about manoeuvre, not carnage at point blank range (although I suppose it is possible to win by LVP Points, it would be an amazing feat, if you ask me).

Moreover, even in those CGs that do reach the last few CG Dates, it's only "unboring" for the German player, who usually gets to bear all his assets on the Entry Area for the 23rd, and fires away with glee at the hapless, entering, Americans because the US threat in the east is altogether missing (and therefore all those LVP Locations in the East [well, not necessarily all, the German only needs 1] are German!) Futility, because it's damn near impossible to enter on the 23rd, secure La Gleize, and get all the way to the East to secure those LVP Locations that the squandered early US forces failed to Control/retain.

Played correctly, the two aforementioned KGP III mishaps will not occur.

The key to KGP III, and it's best play value attribute, is manoeuvre. It's one of the true manoeuvre CG out there - true for all the KGP CG, which is why they are my favourite CGs.

In KGP III, the American has surprisingly few assets available until the 23rd (or the Night of the 22nd, which is the real kicker in this CG). You'll be able to Purchase just about all of the US available forces before the 23rd, and you'll have a lot to do with these few and priceless commodities.

In the first few CG Dates, play for time/terrain why. Make him attack you. Some may find this boring, but for others the excitement is from waiting to see just what the German will allow them to do before the Germans finally get frustrated and attack. Hit 'em where they ain't!

On the 1st Date, this is fairly straight forward - come in at the K56 Entry Area and secure it (make it a viable Set-Up Area with Entrenchments and Objective Hexes). Expand it south to the Roanne Heights. The V56 guys should all get into the Deep Stream and into the S56 area to cover that approach to the K56 US Entry Area; expand this area to connect to the V56/Roanne Heights Set Up Area. Push into and Control the L52 area Woods. Run Shermans along the Roanne Heights hillside, staying in Motion with Gyros to pick off the Tiger II down on the road. Accomplishing this alone will get you the Scenario Win through it's CVPs. Even if you don't get the win (crew escapes/abandons, etc), who cares? Do not try to get across the Stream and get the Mill. Do not try to go up the middle in the V56 area. Remember, you're going for the CG WIN through LVP Location Control; you can win in the last CCPh of the last turn if needs be.

Attack in 19N, but don't attack. Let him Attack, and kill him. At this point you're only trying to defend a German counterattack (which he should do). You need to Attack to retain Freedom of Movement. If he goes Idle, shout for joy, because you can then Attack, but you won't be attacking - go around him and gain real estate, try to get a big Set Up Area that can really threaten to pinch off a sizable chunk of German territory. You can even engage a bit - you'll be able to pick your targets - he'll be under No Move counters. Take him out piecemeal (this rarely happens, but if it does, take advantage of it).

True, this can be boring for the German. Imagine you Attack on 19N with an Idle German, decide to gain real estate and bring on the reinforcements, and not attack anything. After a couple of turns like this the next turn is likely to go something like this:

"You're not going to actually attack me, are you?"

"Nope."

"Man this is boring."

"Sorry, listen, rather than carry on like this, this is what I wanted to do. I've Objective Hexes here, here; I figured to dig in this area and get my Set-Up Area out to here. Let me roll for potential digs and we can end it right now and move on to the next CG Date, OK?"

"Damn, OK."

Don't forget you can end a CG Scenario with both sides approval.

On the 20th, resist temptation to invest Bourgemont; the wise German will have gotten all that real estate on the 1st CG Date, and he'll be waiting for you at the map edge. Let him dry out and rot over there, concentrate on building the primary Set Up Area. It's a long way from over there to come to the rescue too, and odds are he won't anyway, because you don't have to enter on Turn 1, so he'll keep his stuff over there all shiny and new, just in case...

Yes, you'll eventually have to get over there or enter over there, because there's LVP Locations over there. Keep your options open, spread him out, and pick your spots to attack.

Somewhere along the line, you'll have to jump the Stream and try to get the Mill and more terrain. 20AM, 20PM, or 20N. Hopefully, you can get him to abandon it; or at least only defend with a few units he's willing to expend. Choose the weak spot if it's heavily defended, go around it; make it untenable. Wherever you advance, do so in force, and stay together. Cover your flanks, of course. KGP III, ironically can be a battle of the bulges; US Bulges, that is; here and there; everywhere. Watch him scramble as you continually make inroads in his perimeter.

Realize too, that even though some of your assets are "RED", and can only initially enter at Bourgemont, you can always buy them and not enter them, and SHIFT them around to K56!

After this point, it's hard to say what to do, much will depend on the German disposition.

Retain enough Attack Chits to cover the Nights and the last three CG Dates. Use 22N to enter early around E1 and R1.

Until then, preserve your eastern forces to gain Control/terrain on that front, and retain enough of them to pose a viable enough threat for the German to need to keep an eye on them in the end game; this will draw off a lot of attention those late comers will have to face. The best possible situation is to be at La Gleize's doorstep from the east by the 23rd. Trap him in the town, Bombard the joint, and bring in the cavalry.

The Germans have few Infantry assets with which to cover the entire map, and will try not to get into that position. Although they have a lot at the start the Americans need to slowly chip away at them. Expect him to pulverize you if you try a frontally attack though, and probably attacked in the next CG Date to keep you off balance. If you lose too many of your early assets, and the Germans are able to keep the east clear, you'll probably lose.

A really sneaky tactic for the Germans, if it gets that far, assuming you have successfully taken/held some of the east, and assuming that you need to Control all the LVP Locations, is to fall back (and defend at the same time; don't run) from the 23rd Entry Area and retake the lesser defended eastern LVP Locations. In essence, the Germans will be attacking and falling back at the same time; a real "dinger" to see on the map!

KGP III would probably play a bit better and be less volatile in playability if the US initial forces were beefed a tad, and the bulk of the German CPPs were shifted toward the end of the CG.

While not truly exciting to some; it's merely a case of different tactics. Ultimately, though, KGP III is a hard play - there's too many things that the American player must and/or must not do, or it will flop. Several scenarios are like that too, and I suspect that many have been labelled dogs because of it. Given that; once you know what to do/avoid, they become fun/playable, albeit without some measure of freedom of choice with respect to tactics.

Plus, where else apart from the desert do you get to see an 88LL shoot over a mile? For some, there's nothing like nailing Shermans in Bourgemont from the Dinheid Heghts ....
