PREP FIRE

This issue of VFTT is dedicated to the memory of Ian Daglish, who was piloting a light aircraft which crashed into a house in Salford minutes after take-off on Friday 29 July. Ian suffered 80% burns and died of his injuries on Sunday 31 July.

My first contact with Ian was in the early days of VFTT. His brother Andy was listed in the ASL Annual 90 as a play-test co-ordinator, complete with address, so I sent him one of the few copies of the first issue of VFTT in March 1995.

ASL Annual 90 – The Non-Coms of Company A

The unsung heroes of the immense effort expended on ADVANCED SQUAD LEADER are those who act as unpaid playtesters. With every new module of Annual, in groups large and small, scattered across the globe from Montana to Cheshire, Mr. Andy Daglish (#7, The Spinney, Cheadle, Cheshire, Great Britain)
Ian Daglish, Graeme Forster, Bernard Savage, Mike Standbridge

By then Andy wasn't as involved with ASL as he had been at the time of the ASL Annual 90, but he put me in touch with Ian, who was. We exchanged correspondences, one of which was a flyer he had from someone called Neil Stevens, who was arranging for people to get together for an ASL weekend he was calling INTENSIVE FIRE.

In those early days, Ian had already had some early Sealion scenarios published in ASL News – one of them was actually the first scenario I played at the very first INTENSIVE FIRE, and he was already working on his first Normandy module, All American, which was released by Critical Hit in 1997. This was soon followed by Timme's Orchard, and in 1998 by Shanley's Hill. All three dealt with the American 82nd Airborne Division in the opening days of the D-Day landings. His two Scotland the Brave modules (released by Critical Hit in 1998 and 1999) covered the actions of the 15th

INCOMING

MMP'S SPECIAL OPS BEGIN

The reprint of For King and Country began shipping to pre-orders at the end of July, despite some problems with the counter shipment from the printers arriving damaged. The shipment also contained counters for the reprint of ASLSK 3, but none of those were damaged, and as a result it should also begin shipping soon.

Special Ops #1 - Summer 2011, the replacement magazine for both Operations and Operations Special Edition, was released at the World Boardgaming Championships in early August. In addition to non-ASL content (including two games with counters and maps), Special Ops #1 contains two ASL scenarios, two ASL Starter Kit scenarios, and one article each on ASL ("Singling Must Be Taken") and ASL Starter Kit ("ASLSK Corner"). Special Ops should be published twice a year (one winter issue and one summer) and contain a mix of ASL and non-ASL content. It is currently available from MMP for $24.00.

Action Pack 8: Roads Through Rome, featuring ten scenarios and three Charlie Kibler maps (in the same style as those in Action Pack 6: A Decade of War), is expected to be put on pre-order in September. As suggested by the title, the pack focuses on the Italian mainland (although one scenario is set in North Africa) and involves Free French, German, Italian, British, and American forces.

Layout work continues on Festung Budapest. The last of the 17 scenarios are undergoing final tuning, as are the rules, and the 3 Campaign Games. Because many of the scenarios have multi-national orders of battle, and also some capability to "purchase" additional units, 12 of the scenarios fill up two sides of a scenario card (one of them, 'At The Narrow Passage', is a 3-player scenario with several charts and tables and fills up 4 sides). Layout work continues on the 9 countersheets, although one of these has already been printed. The module is expected to be on pre-order later this year.

Work also continues on Rising Sun, the combined Japanese/Chinese/US Marine PTO reprint. The last of the rules edits are under review, with the 2nd edition of Chapter G containing several Q&A clarifications from the original. The 32 scenarios are being proofed and will feature balance adjustments incorporated as needed, and rewrites of SSRs to bring rules references up to current practice. MMP are aiming to have it available for pre-order by the end of the year.

Kurt Miller is working on the as-yet unpainted overlays for The Overlay Bundle. This will contain every official overlay apart from the DASL ones, and MMP hope to have many of them die-cut for ease of use.

Playtest for the ASL Journal 10 scenarios continues. Several of these are played on two 8" x 22" map boards that form a double-wide village.

Once Rising Sun is complete, work will begin on reprinting Hollow Legions. This will include the entire Italian OB (including Italian Chapter H); the Desert Rules (Chapter F); and the desert maps, overlays and counters. It will also include Soldiers of the Negus, originally designed by Rick Thomas, which contained counters, rules and scenarios covering the Italo-Ethiopian War of 1935-36.

Other projects being worked on include Korea War ASL, Ortona, Slaughter at Ponyri, and Ian Daghli's Sealion project.

BOUNDING FIRE'S STEEL CRUCIBLE

Due out from Bounding Fire at ASLOK in October is Crucible of Steel, a massive new module covering the southern salient of the Kursk pocket. It will include 32 scenarios, 9 ASLSK-style mapboards (3 regular geo-maps, 3 double wide maps), one and a half sheets of 5/8" counters (254) and a half sheet of 1/2" counters (144), rules, notes and a magazine. As a bonus, the module will also include the countersheets from both Blood and Jungle and Operation Cobra with grey core instead of the white core of the originals (another four and a half countersheets between them).

It will retail for $125.00 US and Canada, $140.00 elsewhere (prices include shipping), although it is currently available for pre-order on the Bounding Fire website (<http://www.boundingfire.com/>) for $105.00 US and Canada or $120 elsewhere.

NEW BUNKER UP FOR DISPATCH

Dispatches from the Bunker 33 is due out at the Bunker Bash in September, and will feature an analysis of the VotG scenario 'Raid on Rodimtsev', the latest part of Carl

A SELECTION OF TRIBUTES TO IAN

Pete Phillipps

Sad news indeed :-)

I've shared plenty of chats with Ian over the years at tournaments, he was always a joy to speak to and fun to play against - I always remember having a fine game of Head of the Mace from AP4 against him at INTENSIVE FIRE a couple of years ago.

You'll be sadly missed Ian. Thoughts go out to the family.

Neil Stevens

I cannot believe it. A great friend, history enthusiast and ASL player. He will be sorely missed and I feel desperately so sorry for his wife Joy and their two daughters. A real tragedy.

Trevor Edwards

The last time I played Ian, we drank bourbon while he beat the pants off me in SV14 "Day At Night" from the Swedish pack at a recent INTENSIVE FIRE event. He set up an inspired human wave, which ran right across an MMG fire lane. Six squads and a leader set out, and the one leader and a surviving squad took my Finnish AT gun out, so allowing exit of the required VP.

I have his books, all signed. I shall miss him.

Andy McMaster

Just heard the very sad news that Ian Daglish has died. I was stunned when I heard. A great loss

Ulric Schwela

A great chap, a passionate historian with a treasure trove of history anecdotes, an ASL player who I first met in a scout hut in Romiley, friendly and fun, warm and welcoming. To me he will always be an inspiring character and I will miss him. My deepest sympathies to the family.

Perry Cocke

Ian was very generous with his knowledge and talents, so I am convinced that he was loved and respected by many, not just by those of us in the military history and simulation community. A terrible loss. Our hearts go out to his women.

Darrell Andersen

Tough news. Ian was an author, friend, fellow hobbyist and wonderful guy. He'll be missed by all who knew him.

Martin Vicca

Ian, I will miss your presence at heroes and the many chats. My heart goes out to your family.

Joshua Wallis

A sad loss for the community. Our prayers and thoughts should be with his family at this time of grief.

Martin Barker

Terrible and unbelievable news.

Oliver Gray

Such a bad bit of news, he will be sorely missed by all who knew him
Ian was truly a gentleman of the game a very sad loss to the hobby and even more so to his family. Ian and I regularly had a game together at every tourney I attended
Condolences to his family.

Nadir Elfarrar

Very sad to hear this. Condolences to his family and friends. Rest in peace. Ian.

Jeffery Hallett

A terrible shock, indeed, made more so because Dave and I interviewed Ian on Thursday night. This was our first personal interaction with him and we remarked at the end of the recording how interesting and personable he was. A real gentleman. We were already making plans for several followup interviews. Today we are both shocked to the core.

Mats Olsson

Rest in peace

Larry Rohlfing

Tragic

Ian Percy

Very sad indeed.
Huge condolences to Ian's family, I can't begin to imagine how they must feel.
A great scenario designer and author, a thoroughly good man to play against and all round nice bloke, he'll be missed.

Hennie van der Salm

Shocked to hear about this news.
Condolences to his family.

Ian Willey

Truly a sad day. Played Ian for the first time at Heroes this year, we are all poorer for his passing.

Honza

Well, if there is a God and there is a heaven then I hope that Ian Daglish and Jim McCleod are sharing a pint and playing a game together. A sad day for us, but who know what lies beyond death's door.

Paul Saunders

So very, very sad. A true gent.

David Schofield

This is a great shock.
I was in Ian's house only a few weeks ago discussing University options for his 18 year old daughter. He has a younger daughter as well. He often stayed with me when giving his lectures at Bovington or when we had a dinner there. He was a great historian [he'd just got back from giving historical tours of Normandy] and a true ASLer. I often helped with his ASL designs and he always wanted to capture the essence of the battle. They definitely have an historical feel to them.

Ian was always a mainstay of the British tourney scene and we'll all miss him. I can't believe it.

Aaron Cleavin

Huge condolences to all
Ian was a absolutely first rate gentleman, I only had the chance to play him once at Bournemouth in 2000 and I learnt a LOT, not just about ASL but about life as well.
He will be sorely missed.

Gary Fortenberry

We've lost a gentleman and a scholar in the finest sense of the words.
Ian was many things to many folk and will be missed greatly.
Heartfelt condolences go out to his family and friends.

Michael Davies

Shocking news.
Very creative and cultured gentleman
an awful lot of people will miss him.

Vic Provost

My deepest sympathies to Ian's family, our ranks have suffered a big hit.

Neil Brunger

He was indeed a fine chap. Always friendly. I never got the opportunity to play him something I will regret. It will be sad at INTENSIVE FIRE and HEROES. It just shows us that the god's play dice too, and we should live and make the most of everyday. It has not fully sunk in yet. Condolences to the family and his extended group of friends. I am sure they are many.

Luis Calcada

We are devastated by Ian's death. May he rest in Peace. He will be remembered as a good friend and a fine player and historian.

Andy Saunders

Very sorry to hear this news. My condolences.

King Scott

While I did not know Ian personally, I am saddened to hear this news...a true loss to our small community. My sincere condolences to his family.
Rest in peace, Ian.
Semper Fil!

Jerry Simmons

Very sad news indeed. My thoughts are with his family and friends.

Sam Belcher

Ian was an extremely nice guy. I stayed in his home in 2001 when I was in England. He has two girls, ad a lovely wife. I hope the rest of the family is ok. I feel for them.

Ian was a PhD, and has written several books about fighting in Normandy.

But most of all, Ian was a gentleman, and a good man.

Tom Morin

Ian will certainly be missed. May God bless him and his family.

Brien Martin

My condolences to Ian's family. I had the pleasure of corresponding with him a few times over the years, and found Ian to be a nice guy and keen ASL mind.

He will be missed by all of us, some far more than others.

Ray Woloszyn

I first met Ian at the "Bulge" Rencontre ASL meeting in La Gleize, Belgium in 1994 where we roomed in the same cottage. Later on at some of the GB ASL venues we exchange pleasantries and memories. Wow, quite shocking news.

He was not a bad scenario designer as well as an accomplished author.

Chas Smith

This is truly shocking and sad news. Ian and I periodically discussed historical matters and such. He will be sorely missed by the ASL community.

Dave Ramsey

Ian was the very definition of a scholar and a gentleman. He would happily discuss his projects, interspersed with fascinating stories that only a researcher and historian like he could unearth. I enjoyed our chats at every tournament we met at and his loss will be felt at every future event I'll be at.

We've lost a talented designer, author and good friend.

RIP, Ian.

Michael Dorosh

What a shock. Aside from the obvious loss to his family, he had so much more to contribute to the historical community to which he had already given so greatly to. He and his work have touched a lot of people.

Tom Repetti

Ian's energy was infectious; you wanted to drop whatever you were working on and push out whatever he needed, cuz you knew he could go fast and far with it. Operation Sealion is a quintessentially Ian kinda thing; I really hope it's far enough along for someone to pick up and publish in his honour-with-a-u.

We will miss him greatly. Our condolences to his family.

Pete Shelling

So sad.

I had corresponded with him frequently several years ago, when the idea of the 'Normandy Action Pack' was in it's infancy.

As humble as was talented in the scenario design field. A loss all ASL players should feel.

Steve Pleva

My condolences to his family and friends. I spent a day with him many years ago. He was a true gentleman and an accomplished writer and designer. He certainly will be missed.

Nick Edelsten

Really sad news. Ian was someone who's company I really enjoyed and with whom I chatted and emailed with all the time in my old ASL days.

Xavier Vitry

I am shocked and deeply saddened. Last time we talked together was in June, just before one of his Normandy visits, and I still have to reply to an email from him about La Horgne...

My condolences to his family and friends.

What a loss.

Paul Jones

I have lost a friend but my deepest condolences go to Ian's family to whom he was completely devoted. It is with a heavy heart and with tears in my eyes that I must bid a last farewell to Ian. Rest well my friend - you will be truly missed by us all.

Nick Ranson

It was a pleasure having known such a gentleman as Ian, I will miss him, especially at the next INTENSIVE FIRE. My thoughts are with his family and close friends at this sad time.

Gavin White

Ian was my first opponent at my first tournament and was an absolute gent whilst giving me a good kicking, blaming my poor showing on bad luck.

I had been looking forward to further games at HEROES next year. Sadly not to be.

Phil Draper

Dreadful, dreadful news.

I played Ian a number of times at the UK tournaments over the last ten years and had several warm, enlightening and funny conversations with him. His enthusiasm for history, ASL and the place of the British Tommy within both was passionate and infectious.

A gentle encouraging man of great wit and perception I will miss him enormously. Trev, to you and Shaun who new him so well my deepest condolences, as well of course to his family of whom he was so proud.

One of our best has passed and we are poorer beyond measure for it.

Ray Tapio

I am just back from a weekend away and just learned about the death of Ian Daglish in a plane crash yesterday. Right now I am looking at some old photos, absorbing this.

Ian and I spoke during July. All was good, we talked about the impending Kenya trip for his daughter Hazel (17 yrs. old) and that she had just passed her driver's test. He pointed me to a couple of new books on Finland at war subjects, reiterated his interest in helping to proof the GWASL material, and so on.

We got to know one another when Kurt and I travelled to Bournemouth in 1997 and I watched his children grow up in annual photographs that he and Joy included with their Christmas cards since then. He was a devout Catholic and doting father. And a brilliant military historian. He went from being a salesman and marketing guy for Continental Tires on the Continent to foremost tactical-level historian of the British role in the Battle of Normandy.

Craig Benn

All I can say is I never knew anyone who had a remotely bad word to say about him in life or death.

Which is not a bad epitaph really. Rest in peace fella.

Paul Kenny

WOW, Horrible news. A very sad loss. My little interaction with Ian showed him to be a gentleman.

My prayers and condolences for his family.

Chris Olden

My condolences to Ian's family and friends.

Russell Williams

Thank you for your contribution to history and to our hobby. My condolences to his wife and daughters.

My Brother

Andy Daglish

My brother Ian Daglish died at 1am UK time on Sunday July 31st. He was 59. He was the pilot of the light aircraft that crashed in Manchester, England, on Friday lunchtime. He sustained 80% burns.

He radioed a "Mayday - engine failure on take-off" message, which was recorded.

On Google Maps you can find the scene by searching for "City Airport Manchester". My brother took off from runway 09, and crashed on Newlands Avenue.

The police & eye-witnesses are suggesting Ian's crash-landing in the middle gap between the houses was largely successful, as neither he nor his young passenger suffered any serious internal injuries or blood loss.

My brother's gaming career began as a result of our father taking him to see "The Longest Day" in Providence, Rhode Island, in 1962, when he was ten years old. Thereafter he bought a copy of Tactics II. For him, at this time, America was a toy wonderland, and this coloured his memories of childhood. On his return to England he continued his interest in the hobby with Avalon Hill games of the 1960s such as Afrika Korps, and Poultron Press editions of Strategy and Tactics magazine.

Ian read history at Trinity College, Cambridge, and whilst there won the Bowen Prize for his essay on Napoleonic invasions of England. He subsequently gained an MBA from Manchester Business School.

After a career in marketing, lately working for Kelloggs as a marketing executive, Ian joined the ranks of Britain's professional military historians, writing six books on the Normandy campaign, as well as becoming the British Army's preferred tour guide to the battlefields of northern France.

Ian was an early member of the AHKS play-by-mail group, regularly attending their meetings in England. He latterly concentrated on ASL, designing and testing modules and scenarios, and attending conventions at home and abroad.

Ian leaves his wife, Joy, and two teenage daughters, Hazel and Fiona.

Ω

In His Own Words

The following was taken from Ian's blog – Pete

Well, when I was about four years old, I was given my first toy 'soldiers'. A guardsman resplendent in red tunic and bearskin; a cowboy with a lasso. Both in fragile metal and - yes - when their heads inevitably broke off, they were re-attached with matchsticks. Later came Britains soldiers and Dinky military vehicles - the odd mix of scales did not matter much to a six-year old.

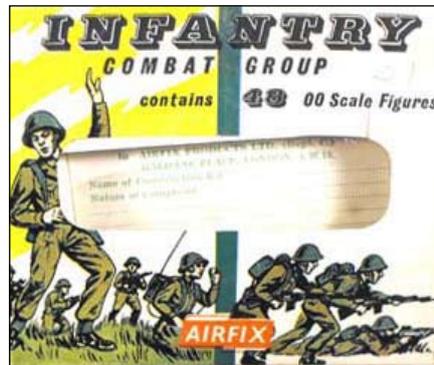

More significant perhaps was the family move to the USA, which led me at the age of eight to grade school in Chickasaw, Alabama. School History lessons there offered great excitement to a young boy. History consisted mainly of fighting the indigenous tribes (*), fighting the bloody British (), fighting each other, and fighting a couple of World Wars.

'Local' history involved the fort commander who neglected to close his gates and got scalped by the Chickasaw Indians; and the Confederate forts (Fort Gaines and Fort Morgan) with their big guns, still guarding the approaches to Mobile Bay, long after Farragut had 'damned the torpedoes'. Even a century on, awareness of the Civil War was acute, with the Stars and Bars still flying (quite illegally) over municipal buildings. What is more, the school library had a copy of that huge tome, the 'American Heritage Picture History of The Civil War' with those wonderful perspective illustrations of the great battles. Perhaps my most eagerly awaited Christmas present ever was the big box of 'Blue and Gray' soldiers, cannon, and terrain.

(*), Cherokee, Choctaw, Creek, and Chickasaw

() On a school trip to Concord and Lexington, young Ian was a little disturbed to see the Stars and Stripes over the grave of the 'unknown British soldier', one of three private soldiers (Thomas Smith, Patrick Gray, or James Hall of the 4th Regiment Light Infantry Company) who died at Concord.

A few years on, and a significant moment occurred in Woolworths, Apponaug, Rhode Island, when Ian discovered Airfix 'German Infantry' and a few moments later, behind boxes of 'Guards Band' and 'Farm Animals', revealed the box of 'Infantry Combat Group' destined to fight many a battle against their Teutonic opponents, supported at first by Roco minitanks, later by (more appropriately scaled) Airfix vehicles.

Back in England, at Cheadle Hulme School the only subject I was really comfortable with was English, largely thanks to the inspirational Mr Alan Kelk. But when I was fifteen, History class called for an essay on the American Civil War. Suddenly I realised how many of my 'outside' interests could be applied in school. Encouraged by my teachers, Michael Scaife and Gwynneth Saunders, History became my subject of choice.

On to university. Trinity College, Cambridge. The finest college in the world, and somehow I was admitted. We were not allowed to specialize very much (had to keep the medieval dons in work!). But it was good to cover a broader spectrum than I might have chosen. And though it's a sad comment on humanity, it helped my interest that 'military' history is to be found in whatever period one studies. My special subject was the Revolt of the Netherlands (Dutch vs. Hapsburgs) and my thesis 'Napoleon's Invasion of England'.

Fast forward to summer 1994. Taking time off from worldwide marketing for Rolls-Royce Motor Cars Limited, returning from holiday in the Dordogne with Joy and six-month baby Hazel, stopped for a picnic lunch in the shade of a tree beside the Orne river. 'Let's not go through Caen, but do a detour over this hill.' Hill 112, in fact. I drove slowly over that famous battlefield, now tranquil, golden corn baking under blue skies in the hot early-afternoon July sun. Then the road narrowed, winding steeply down through a little village on southern slopes of the River Odon valley. 'Gavrus'... wasn't that the location where the 2nd Argylls were besieged, as recounted in John Keegan's book 'Six Armies in Normandy'? The seeds were sown; the following years would see many returns to that little place.

The rest was, quite literally, 'history'.

SIMULATIONS AND WARGAMES

'Wargaming' is serious business. Ever since an ancient warrior scratched a battle plan in the sand, military planners have combined intelligence about the enemy and knowledge of terrain to predict and plan the future.

H G Wells famously wrote his 1913 'Little Wars' as little more than entertainment:

'A game for boys from twelve years of age to one hundred and fifty and for that more intelligent sort of girl who likes boys' games and books.' But even at that time, the Prussian 'Kriegspiel' had already evolved into a serious, detailed plan for the conquest of France and Russia. A century on, some of the commercial wargame designers of the 1960s and 1970s are to be found advising the Pentagon. And the value of military simulations is increasingly recognised by academia. University military history courses increasingly employ simulation to broaden awareness of the subject: exploring the 'might have been' as well as the narrow path of 'what actually happened'.

Nowadays, 'wargaming' is a broad church. Some who take part have little interest in history; for them the pursuit a more intricate version of chess, a game to win or lose. Others however care passionately, and seek out the wargames which appear best able to simulate actual (or likely) historical outcomes. For some, the gap between wargame designer and wargame player may narrow, as commercially available wargames provide the template for individuals to design and play out their own researched scenarios. And to complete the circle, the historian may gain insights from well designed simulations.

This author feels it absolutely necessary to walk any battlefield about which he intends to write. Likewise, military historians studying different periods may find insights from drawing a longbow, firing a black-powder musket, or sitting in a Sherman tank. And so too may the historian gain insights from simulation. Whereas a book about the Waterloo campaign is most likely going to end with an Allied victory on 18 June, a wargamer placed in Wellington's position on 16 June, with little certainty of the enemy's plans or movements, may gain a deeper understanding of the options he faced and the decisions that had to be made.

And now the confessional. Yes, I greatly enjoy wargaming. Specifically, the popular and extremely detailed Second World War tactical simulation called 'Advanced Squad Leader'. This is a tactical-level wargame representing individual leaders and vehicles, and (as the name suggests) squads of a dozen or so men. Indeed, it is partly 'ASL' that rekindled a childhood interest in the Second World War. As mentioned before, I believe in telling the story of a battle with reference to low-level, tactical actions. As I conduct my research into the details of the Second World War, I am frequently moved to amuse myself by translating historical events into playable ASL scenarios. Great fun, with the added benefit of fostering interest in the huge conflict that was the Second World War.

DAGLISH FAMILY

Like many people who bear the surname 'Daglish', my father's family hails from County Durham. No, not Scotland (though as my middle name suggests, I can claim Scots ancestry from the Malcolms on my mother's side).

When I was approached by the Daglish One-Name Study to undergo a DNA test, I was initially suspicious but in the end relented and was pleased to find no surprises. All my closest matches appear to originate in the area of Northumberland and Durham. Grandfather Daglish always maintained that the family arrived across the North Sea centuries ago, and my best guess is that my forbears settled the area known as the Danegeld and so became... Danegeldish!

Grandfather Francis Richard (Frank) Daglish was a machine-gunner with the 10th Northumberland Fusiliers. Joining-up in 1914, he became expert with his Lewis gun, so much so that he was offered a place as an air gunner with the Royal Flying Corps, just before the aerial 'Bloody April' of 1916. He had the good sense to decline, otherwise this website and its creator would probably not exist. Severely wounded on the Somme, Frank nevertheless enjoyed telling his war stories for the rest of his days. My other grandparents also served in the First World War; indeed they met on active service in France. Grandfather George Augustus (Gus) Dorman was a telegraphist and grandmother Elizabeth (Betty) Malcolm served with the Women's Auxiliary Army Corps (WAAC). (Family tales of her bayoneting Germans impressed a young Ian, but later in life he learned to question unsubstantiated anecdotes.)

Similarly, my parents were brought together, from Durham and Smethwick, by the outcome of the Second World War. As a chemistry graduate (from Trinity College Cambridge, where he suffered the bomb that fell in Whewell's Court and saw London burning when firewatching from John's College chapel roof), my father Anthony Fenwick (Tony) Daghish was not permitted to go for officer training but instead was sent to the armaments factories of Bishopston, outside Glasgow.

Only after I had researched the 2nd Argyll & Sutherland Highlanders for some years did my dad ask me, one Christmas, if I knew that they had the biggest cap badge in the British Army. Of course I knew that. But I nearly fell off my chair when Dad announced that he had once worn it. How could he, as he never joined the Army? Ah, but he did serve in the Bishopston Home Guard, under a former Argylls officer who had his men wear the badge. And, as a colonel of the Regiment subsequently told me, 'Once an Argyll, always an Argyll.'

ALDERLEY MARKETING LTD

I am a marketing professional. Though my interest in history has never waned, I have enjoyed a fascinating career in marketing, managing all sorts of brand names: from Kellogg's Corn Flakes to Rolls-Royce motor cars.

Right now, I am working in 'Interim Management' through my company 'Alderley Marketing Ltd'. This involves temporary jobs, generally contracts of five to six months, completing specific projects, filling senior positions while a permanent incumbent is recruited, or covering a senior position for the duration of maternity leave. Interim managers are typically 'suitable over qualified' for any position, in order to be able to adapt quickly to a given role and deliver results with minimal delay.

I have experience of working in virtually all industries: from utilities to transport; luxury goods to food and drink. The variety is enjoyable and achieving visible results in the course of a relatively short assignment is invariably a most rewarding experience.

Ian is a Member of the Chartered Institute of Marketing, the Medmenham Club, the British Commission for Military History, and the Alderley History Group. He is a Commandeur of the Commanderie de Bordeaux, and a qualified pilot (interests always pursued separately).

Not, How Did He Die, But How Did He Live?

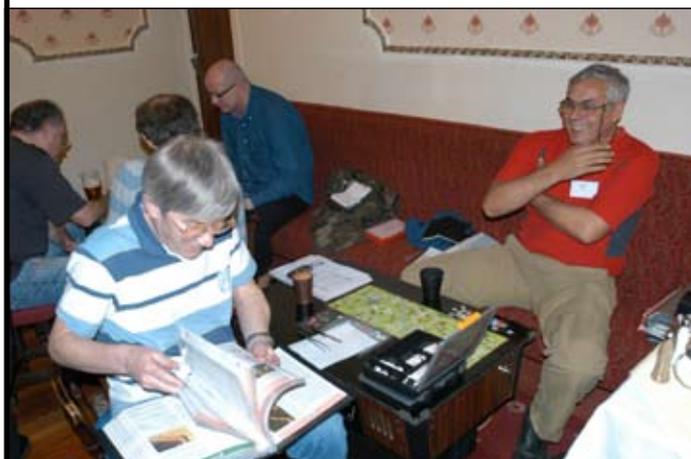

Unknown author

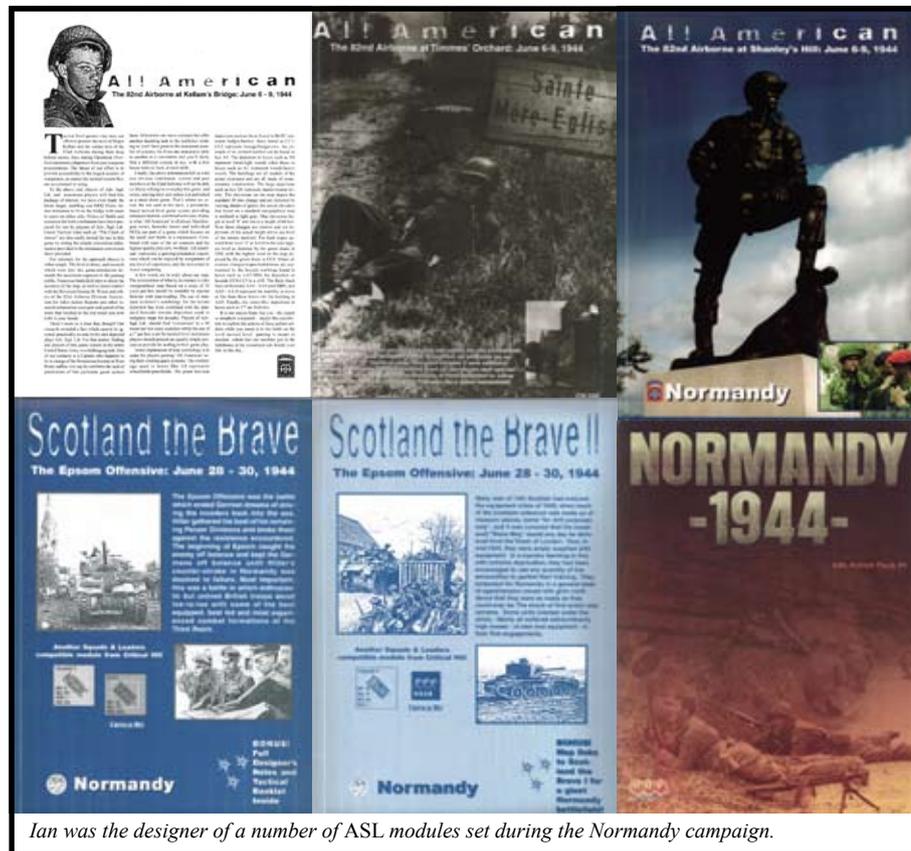

Not how did he die, but how did he live?
 Not what did he gain, but what did he give?
 These are the units to measure the worth
 Of a man as a man, regardless of birth.
 Not, what was his church, nor what was his creed?
 But had he befriended those really in need?
 Was he ever ready, with word of good cheer,
 To bring back a smile, to banish a tear?
 Not what did the piece in the newspaper say,
 But how many were sorry when he passed away.

Scottish Division in the Epsom Offensive at the end of June 1944. June 1999 saw two groups play CG3 from STB at Mad Vet Con, one of Ian's favourite ASL memories (despite being a part of the losing British side in one of the games!). 2008 saw the release of probably his finest work, AP4 Normandy (albeit with a couple of scenarios designed by MMP), complete with revised wall advantage and bocage rules, an issue that had been troubling Ian since the early days of ASL. One of the finest games of ASL I have ever played was against Ian when we played 'Head of the Mace' from the pack at INTENSIVE FIRE 2008, which went down to the wire (and several bottles, wine in Ian's case, Newcastle Brown Ale in mine :-)).

Although known as a serious historian and scenario designer, Ian also had a silly side. Who else would design a scenario based on the 1966 World Cup Final between England and Germany, or write an article on resurrection and demonic possession! (Both of these can be found in VFTTS).

As well as ASL, Ian was also interested in Napoleonic warfare, and for the past couple of years we had been trying to arrange to play the old SPI quad game Napoleon's Last Battles. We were due to play at HEROES this year on the Wednesday and Thursday, but at the last minute other commitments meant he couldn't arrive until the Friday. I even made a start on turning the game into a VASSAL module and had completed the Quatre Bras folio, and sent Ian a copy, but we never got to play :-)

In memory of Ian, a plaque is going to be placed on the Memorial Wall at Bovington Tank Museum. If you want to donate towards the cost, you can either send a donation via PayPal to iandaglishmemorial@vftt.co.uk or post a cheque payable to PETE PHILLIPPS. Any surplus funds will be passed on to the family. It is planned that there will be an unveiling ceremony at Bovington on Friday 28 October (the INTENSIVE FIRE Friday).

'Til next issue, roll Low and Prosper.

NAPOLEON'S LAST BATTLES

REVIEWED
I M DAGLISH

It was with Napoleon At Waterloo that SPI tried out the idea of an "introductory" game with simple, unambiguous rules making for quick and enjoyable play. Since then, games from Borodino to Sixth Fleet have claimed descent from the "NAW System", as has the whole range of "Quad" games. And, the wheel has turned full circle. SPI return to the Waterloo Campaign to show just how far game-design has come in the six years since Napoleon At Waterloo.

The NAW mapboard was adequate but compare that of the equivalent "La Belle Alliance", with its blue streams, green woods, tan-coloured elevations and discreetly numbered hexes. The units, too, are vastly improved: appropriately colour-coded, serving as a reminder of the assortment of differently-attired troops under Wellington; browns, greens, and shades of grey padding-out the "thin red line". As to the play, with nearly twice as many units on the board (99 as against 53), "La Belle Alliance" still flows very nicely. The change from divisional to brigade level serves to increase the interest of the game but without the complication that was found in the "NAW Expansion Kit" rules.

Taken separately, each of the four games in this package has its particular appeal. Having tried myself to develop a balanced simulation of Quatre Bras, I now find that SPI have succeeded! Starting with just four units on the board, the Anglo-Allied player has to hold off Ney's entire force until the remaining 80% of his strength arrives, in dribs and drabs that will usually have to be flung straight into the front line. If "Quatre Bras" is the intricate needle-match, "Ligny" is the duel of steam rollers. A real Napoleonic set-piece this: army hammering against army. "Wavre" is interesting, if only for its novelty while "La Belle Alliance" is certainly one of the better games covering the classic among classic battles.

Fears the the "Campaign Game" would turn out a mere slapping-together of the separate Quads were unfounded. This really must be considered as a game in its own right. There are additional rules, incorporating command-control by leader units. At first, these seem complicated but they work well, demonstrating the importance of the leaders' presence without recourse to the "idiocy" rules we used to see. These rules encourage corps-integrity; it pays to keep units in their historical formations. For one thing, "eliminated" units can be brought back by corps officers "to fight another day", albeit in depleted form. (To allay suspicions of misprints on the mapsheets, it is worth pointing out that in the Quad games, some units start in depleted state).

These extra rules are not just gimmickry. For the extra dimension they add, they detract very little from the ease of play. This really is not a complex game. Large, but not so complicated that it cannot easily and rewardingly be played solitaire.

Best of all, this game captures the "feel" of the situation. Even playing strictly to win, one is led by the rules to act in a "historical" fashion. Even after reading the books on the campaign, even after pacing over the battlefields, there is still a lot one can learn from this simulation. After all, you know that at the end of the history book, Wellington will win. Wellington himself realised all too clearly that Quatre Bras and Waterloo were touch-and-go affairs, the outcome uncertain. In this simulation, one realises some of the very real possibilities. In one game, Wellington was cut down by French Lancers before Quatre Bras. Something similar actually happened but he just managed to escape. What if he had not? (In this case, the Prince of Orange did a valiant job holding Quatre Bras until Blucher could disengage from the great Battle of Marbais, join hands with the Allies at Quatre Bras, and turn with them to inflict crippling losses on the pursuing French!)

In summary, "Napoleon's Last Battles" is a set of four highly enjoyable games. It is also one of the best simulations of the whole Waterloo campaign that you will come across.

Ian reviews the SPI quad game Napoleon's Last Battles, in the SimPubs magazine Phoenix 11, dated Jan/Feb 1978.

15 Questions – Ian Darglish

Ian Willey

This interview with Ian was posted by Ian Willey on his blog at <http://walladvantage.blogspot.com/> at the end of May 2011, and is reprinted with permission – Pete.

My second British designer on the bounce, both picked up at HEROES last March. Ian needs little introduction, not only has he designed many a scenario both for MMP and TPP he also is a respected historian and author of 6 books.

1. Which published scenario of your own are you most proud of and why?

Probably 'J68 Unlucky Thirteenth' from ASL Journal 4, balanced, historical, and I still enjoy playing it (Better to come soon?)

2. Which scenario that you have not designed is your favourite?

Of all time: probably 'E Hill 621' from The General and ASL Classic. But currently I am a big fan of 'SP163 First To Fastov'.

3. What for you is the most important part of a scenario design?

Multiple source historical research.

4. Have you a favourite subject or theatre?
Normandy 1944 ;-)

5. What came first, your interest in ASL or WWII?

ASL (SL Actually)

6. Best or most memorable ASL moment?

First published module (CH All American)

7. The ASL moment you most want to forget?

Mistakes in publishing All American.

8. What year did you first start to play SL/ASL?

1978 :-)

9. How many scenarios would you estimate you have played and had published?

Played 300?
Published 65?

10. What rule would you change if you had the chance?

Overrun: It is needlessly complex.

11. When was the Golden Era for ASL?
2011.

12. Which chart do you use IFT or IIFT?

Generally IFT because that is what British opponents favour. I prefer IIFT.

13. How often do you play (not including playtests)?

Maybe 20 a year vs. opponents.

14. When you play do you have a movie of the action playing in your head?

No, I get deeply into what is going on the map board.

15. Any rule you would like to highlight as a useful but under used rule?

Tank Riders entering play (and elite Russian's risking bail outs after deep penetration).

THE SEA LION SCENARIOS

by Ian Daghish.

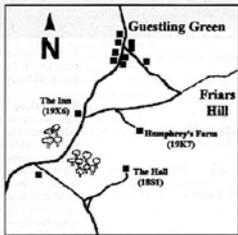

This is not the place to debate whether Hitler was serious about invading England though my own belief is that the decision not to invade was political, not military. To avoid academic debate, I have chosen to base these scenarios on a work of fiction

The Subject
I have been researching invasions of Britain for 25 years, and planning Squad Leader Sea Lion scenarios for over ten. In this time a lot of new material - both good and rubbish - has come to light. There can be no doubt as to the seriousness of the Kriegsmarine in their thorough preparations! To avoid academic debate, I have chosen to base these scenarios on a work of fiction: the short story 'If Hitler Had Invaded England' by C. S. Forrester, published in his book 'Gold From Crete'. Three of the scenarios are taken directly from references in the story, which is highly recommended as a very good read. Nevertheless, all details of units and weapon availability are from historic records.

The Forces
The condition of the British and Commonwealth forces in the days following Dunkirk was not good. Heavy weapons and ammunition were in short supply. On 29 May, Ironside noted that he had very little artillery - nearly all the new 25 pounders lost, and the anti-tank guns'. The 4-3-6 Green British MMC in 'Their Darkest Hour' seriously flatters the Local Defence Volunteers at this stage of the conflict, the LDV were a very patchy force. Let us say that the Guestling LDV, with homes so close to the sea, were particularly well trained and motivated. While the men of Kent in 'Ironside' represent villagers armed with solid-shot in their twelve bore shot-guns, and all the special devices that could be put in their hands. Of course, the Northover Projector was a reality, and the MOL-P in the hands of unqualified users gives a good impression of its likely effectiveness! German Orders of Battle come largely from Wheatley and from Schenk. I have been asked whether the Panzer II 'Flamingoes' were part of 1st Panzer, in 1940 they were actually assigned to 16th Army. There was some controversy over their role: their commander saw their role as supporting a massed Panzer attack, but instead they were planned to be used in support of infantry shock troops spearheading the landings. I have also been asked to justify the use of the Panzer III Ausf F. There is no doubt that some of these were available in mid-1940 (and I see my friend Pedro Ramis assigns the Pz III F to Gross Deutschland in his excellent 'Stonne' module). The Germans would certainly have used their most up to date armour for this tremendously important venture. Elements of the Abwehr's 'Brandenburg' regiment were assigned to 16th and 9th Armies, lightly armed and motorcycle mounted. After supporting the initial attacks in 'commando' roles, they would no doubt have been assigned to further special duties.

The Scenarios
Two of these scenarios have been published at an early stage of development in 'Despatch' the AHKS European newsletter. Thanks to those who helped with playtesting. As usual, I have favoured period feel rather than strict 50:50 balance, though I believe none of these situations is hopelessly one-sided. Various contemporary maps were available, but this would have impacted on play balance. Throughout, I avoided the use of too many Scenario Special Rules. The parachute drop in 'Darkest Hour' and

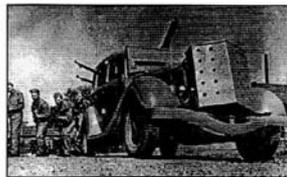

1 This map refers to 'Their Darkest Hour', scenario to be published in one of our next issues.

2 The 'Nemesis' scenario is included in this issue. The other scenarios will be published in issues to come.

ASL News # 29 - March '95 - 19

Designer's notes

the MOL-P may cause you to re-read the appropriate rules - but these are not overly complex. The scenarios are intended for easy play. Forrester's story is rich in scenario material and I have further scenarios in development featuring beach landings, airfields, and the Royal Military Canal.

The Setting

Various contemporary maps were available, and the standard ASL boards fitted very well. In fact, after selecting the ASL mapsheets for 'Their Darkest Hour', I discovered some more detailed maps of the area, and was astonished to find that some extra details on these maps were already featured on the ASL mapsheets selected! (See sketch) Truth emulating fiction! I considered making all buildings stone, but this would have impacted on play balance.

DOUBLE 1 2011

Derek Cox

The weekend started on Thursday evening, with the early arrivals heading into Chelmsford town centre for a pre-tournament meal. The waitressing staff looked on somewhat bemused as tales of improbable hits, ambushes, destroyed tigers and boxcars drifted across the restaurant – just feel sorry for the token female who had to suffer all of this!

Friday morning saw the start of the one day minis. This year, two themes had been chosen, “Back in Black” (SS versus the world!) and “Best of 2010” (pretty self-explanatory heading), plus a Starter Kit mini. Each mini consisted of two rounds, straight knockout, with 4 entrants per group. Given that 2011 was the first year that Double One had been extended to the Friday, Brendan and I were delighted to find 20 people wanting to take part in the Friday minis! A quick straw poll got 5 minis running, and after two rounds of dice rolling, the following winners were announced:-

- Back in Black (1) – Pete Phillipps
- Back in Black (2) – Gerard Burton
- Back in Black (3) – Sam Prior
- Best of 2010 (1) – Paul Legg
- Best of 2010 (2) – Andy Smith

Saturday morning broke with numbers swelling to 28, with 24 signing up for the main tournament - Darren Orwin and Richard Dagnall deciding to tackle one of the monster scenarios from Valor of the Guards. The format followed that of last year, with entrants being divided into groups of 4, playing each other in a Round Robin system.

Round 1 featured the stars of the forthcoming MMP module, Hakke Palle, with three scenarios involving the Finns. Surprisingly, although possibly due to its veteran status in the history of ASL, ‘Fighting Withdrawal’ was by far and away the most popular choice, with many games going down to the wire (both in terms of time and turns). The other choices for the morning session were ‘FRF 18 Through Fire & Ice’ and ‘ESG8 Soummussalmi Sandwich’.

Round 2 arrived in the form of “Casey Jones”, featuring scenarios with a railway theme. As this was the Saturday afternoon / evening session, these scenarios were slightly longer but, with hindsight, were probably too long for a tournament, especially given that one was still going at 2am on Sunday morning. Note to self – more pre-tournament testing for 2012! The scenarios arriving at platform 1 were ‘121 End station Budapest’, ‘AP60 Nishne Nyet’ and ‘J83 Bloody Nose’.

Proceedings were brought to a halt mid-afternoon by the fire alarm going off. Everyone duly filed out on the basis that it was a false alarm, then the sudden realisation that it might not be and we could be looking at a very expensive cardboard bonfire put everyone on their toes for a quick dash through to liberate ASL kit. Fortunately, it duly proved to be a false alarm, caused, we believe, by an errant fly getting into the smoke alarm system (that, or the spreading blazes from the fires set in Fighting Withdrawal earlier that day).

Saturday evening saw the inaugural Double One quiz, as hosted by the ASL's world answer to Nicholas Parsons, our own, our very own, Richard Dagnall. As most people had already hit the student bar, it was a fairly uproarious affair. After 3 rounds of questions based on ASL, WWII and general history, Mick Essex proved himself the knowledge master, despite some debate over the German codeword for the proposed invasion of Malta! The quiz will definitely return in 2012, by which time the AV kit in the bar should be working again.....

Heavy Weather arrived on Sunday morning, with rain, mud and snow presenting challenges to the attendees in the respective scenarios 'A83 Last Of Their Strength', 'SP176 Smiling Albert' and 'AP18 Village of the Damned'. At this point in proceedings, only the winner of 1 of the 6 groups had already been decided, so there were some tense moments, most noticeably in Group B, where the eventual winner was decided on the ASL Crusader Ladder Points that each of the 3 possible winners had beaten!

The final games wrapped up around 1pm, and the winners were as follows:-
Group A – Sam Prior
Group B – Gerard Burton
Group C – Ian Pollard
Group D – Wayne Baumber
Group E – Martin Barker
Group F – Stuart Brant

their 100% record at Double One!

Thank you to everyone who came along and made the weekend so enjoyable.

Double One 2012 is already booked for the weekend of June 22nd to 24th. Already in the pipeline is a curry night at the local Indian restaurant on the Thursday evening (21st), themed minis involving the Desert and the Japanese, a 3 day / 3 round tournament involving monster scenarios, and the main tournament with an Olympic theme underlying it all, plus the now infamous Saturday evening quiz. Registration fee will be £15, and we will be publishing the scenarios on the Double One website at Christmas.

ONE OUT OF FOUR

THE SAGA OF SAVING PRIVATE RYAN

Great Movie Series by Wild Bill Wilder

Wild Bill Wilder Saving Private Ryan Module Review

Mark Drake

This review is based on a series of posts Mark made on http://forums.gamesquad.com/showthread.php?101049-Saving-Private-Ryan-module-by-WBW-\(LONG!\)). This compilation is printed here with his permission – Pete

I recently purchased a copy of Wild Bill Wilder's One Out of Four: The Saga of Saving Private Ryan and thought I would write some initial thoughts on this module. I paid a few dollars for it but am interested in it as I did design a scenario on the last battle scene (which Michael Dorosh used in his Scenario Design Guide.)

First off the module comes with a cover sheet describing the product contents on the front side, while the reverse side is an ad for more of Wild Bill Wilder's ASL modules that he sells on Ebay. The next page is double-sided description of this product, part of the Great Movie Series, talking about the movie itself, which five scenarios are in the pack, and then the counters and maps.

THE SCENARIOS

There are 3 cardstock cards with 5

scenarios. Four of them are based on actual scenes from the movie. The scenario titled "The 88's" is based on the scene where Miller describes his mission to his CO about knocking out some 88s. The last battle scene scenario "Miller's Last Stand" is printed on both sides of one card and is the largest of the bunch.

I have not played any of the scenarios yet but I do plan on comparing WBW's last battle scene scenario to my version.

COUNTERS

There are 106 counters of various types included, one of which is the French family shown in the film which appear in scenario 'SPR03 The Square.'

Overall the counters breakdown as follows:

- 36 info markers
- 24 SS (4 SMC, 4 1-3-7 Crews, 8 6-5-8 squads, and 8 3-4-7 HS)
- 36 US (3 7-5-8 para squads, 5 3-5-7 para HS, 7 7-5-9 ranger squads, 3 3-4-8 ranger HS, 3 3-4-9 engineer HS and 15 SMC)
- 10 5/8 counters (2 LC, 20L AA Gun, 2

P-51 Mustangs, and 5 German Wrecks)

As you can see the SMC are close to official ones but most of the unit counters are a different interpretation of what we are used to seeing in US and SS OOBs. Not a big thing to me as I have seen this sort of variant in other third-party modules. Just would like to know why these particular values were chosen for each type of unit.

Did notice that the unit designation for Pvt. Ryan shows he is a member of the 2nd Rangers – thought he was 101st in the movie.

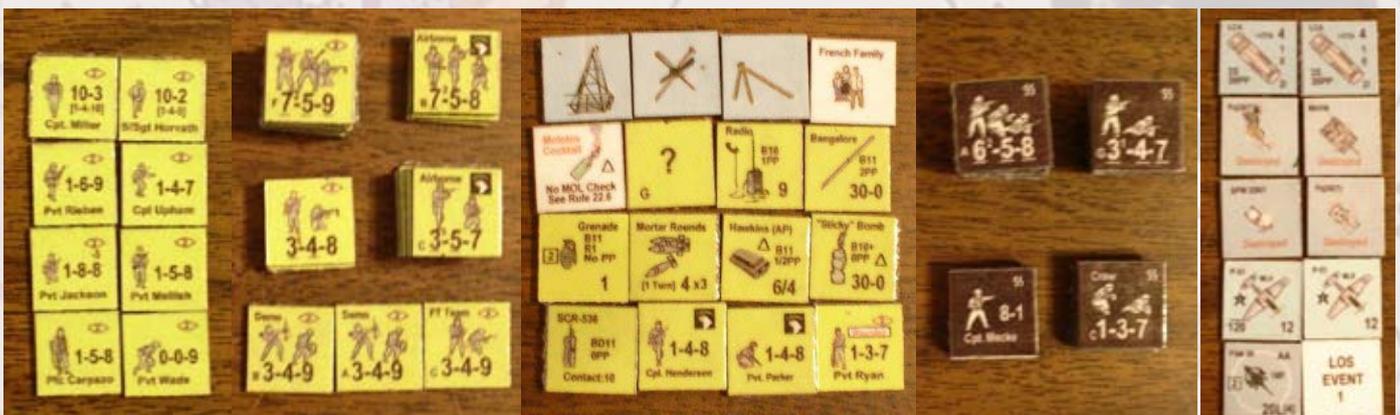

MAPS

There are 5 cardstock mapsheets in this module.

One is the bunker complex overlooking the Omaha beach section where Miller and his squad landed and attacked.

The second map is a small half-map with the square in the French town where Miller's squad ran into the French family, duelled with a German sniper, and shot up the German HQ with US paratrooper help.

The last 3 mapsheets are of the same battle – the town of Ramelle where the climactic battle of the film takes place. One sheet is a small hex map of the section of town leading to the bridge. Two more mapsheets are larger hexed maps of the same battle, but each sheet depicts half of what the smaller map shows.

Also one of the half-map sheets (the Square) does have a small overlay of the radar station for scenario 4, where Miller's squad attacks the German mg nest in front of the radar station.

CONCLUSION

Overall I think this is a module that has potential. The counters are not bad but could be better. The maps look very amateurish and there are no rules on the terrain – for example, on the Ramelle maps how would you handle play in many of the road/building hexes? On the Omaha map what is the CA of the bunker?

There are no explanations for these map issues! This is definitely the weakest part of the module. It's too bad there are not even any map SSRs for these mapsheets.

The scenarios look OK at first for an amateur effort but further in-depth study shows there are some questions in each scenario. I've already mentioned about the CA of the German bunker in 'SPR01 Dog Green'; in 'SPR02 The 88's' the German OOB allows 2 Panzerfausts, and an SSR allows the Germans to set up mines with AF4 – what is that? Looks like leftovers from when he designed old SL scenarios. 'SPR05 Miller's Last Stand' the SSR allows the US side to use HIP and ? – how many set up HIP and Concealed? These are just a few issues with the scenarios. It's too bad as I think these scenarios could have been made into some interesting ones to play in ASL.

Overall this is a poor effort, which I expected given the history/quality of past ASL products from WBW. I think this module could have been done much better and even wrote to the producer of these modules (Tom Tietz) not only asking him to consider making improvements but offering to assist in improving the quality of his modules. No response. Not surprising given that folks buy his modules at Ebay for a nice chunk of change (and I am guilty of this as well, as this is my 4th item I have purchased but also the one I paid the most for due to curiosity of what the quality of it may be as well as the subject matter.)

If you are looking to get this as a module that you expect to play right out of the package then you will be disappointed. There are a LOT of issues just reading thru this module that require fixes/modifications if you wish to actually play any of the scenarios. If you are interested in this as a novelty/collector's item then it fits the bill perfectly. Too bad it is not more on the playable side. As I expected when I purchased it, but I also pretty much thought I can make some modifications to what is here and play it solo for my own amusement.

THE SQUARE

By Wild Bill Wilder

SPR03

9 June, 1944, St Mere Eglise, France 1620 Hours: Miller's group has been moving all day and has approached St. Mere Eglise in the midst of a summer downpour. The sound of the rain is drowned out with the sound of gunfire. It is a hot fight in the city. Ryan connects with Sgt. Hill and begins to move with his men and those of Sgt. Hill to the other side of the city.

US Forces, mixed units of Rangers and paratroopers: Set up as follows

north of hex row 6, The Square map:

Miller, Horvath, Reiben, Carpazo, Mellish, Jackson, Wade, Upham

north of hex row 5, The Square map: 7-5-8x2 8-1 SCR436x1

Map Setup

Turns: 6

Setup: German player sets up first, using HIP. US player moves first Victory Conditions: The US player wins if he has Captain Miller and Captain Hamill in the same hex by the end of turn six. Otherwise it is a German win.

Special Rules:

1. It is raining heavily with a visibility of 4 hexes.
2. No two US MMC units of either side may be stacked together at the start of the battle. All German MMC counters must be separated by two hexes at the start of the battle.
3. When an American unit comes into the LOS of hex B3, an additional German sniper may be located (without placing it on the map) in hex B2, 3, and 4. It can only be spotted in one of two ways: (1) Private Jackson may spend one turn looking for the sniper if in LOS of these hexes. At the end of that turn the sniper is considered spotted; (2) any US unit moves within two hexes of the sniper's location.
4. If Cpl Upham spends one turn with French family, German player must reveal location of the nearest MMC unit to the French family location.

Aftermath: As the small combined force moves toward the other side of town, they find a French family looking for help. Carpazo is killed by a sniper and the rest of the journey across the town is filled with dangerous surprises. They find a paratrooper named Ryan but it is not the man they are trying to find. The search must continue.

Küstenjäger!

War in the Aegean Sea!

Out of the Sea

A review of KüstenJäger! Special Forces II

Ian Willey

This review was originally posted on Ian's blog at <http://walladvantage.blogspot.com/> and is reprinted here with his permission – Pete KüstenJäger is the second Heat of Battle scenario pack to focus on the actions of a single special forces unit, in this case the German KüstenJäger. The KüstenJäger Abteilung was the Coastal Raider Detachment of the Brandenburg regiment, and undertook several actions in the Aegean.

The front and back covers contain a few details about the module, but the interior pages have a major use. A total of 4 tables are included, two for designers of future scenarios which is a nice touch, but it's a shame there is no list of sources. A table of characteristics, interesting things like allowed to Self Rally and deploy to swim (keeping inherent weapons) give you get an idea of the flavour of the pack at first brush. The Boat Card break down is again useful and would be needed each time you played unless you happened to play them all on the bounce. What is a little confusing is that the example shows the Nationality as American and we only have German and British cards in the pack, possibly originally further packs were planned? Lastly we have the make up of a Company for Solitaire use (SASL) but with the lack of a purpose built Random Event table and as mentioned in the main body of the rules only one official mission (Recon) would be suitable and then would have to have several changes to make it work. So more of a place to start than a ready to play addition to the pack. It does not detract from the pack so no harm but the lion's share of work seems to have been left for any SASL designer to do.

The overlay is 14 hexes long (counting both half hexes as .5) and 5.5 hexes deep depicting at greatest a 3 hex water inlet attached to rising ground rising to level 3. It looks an interesting overlay but lacks any ID details so I will write on the back of mine before laminating. On the same good quality card is the two boat cards that come with the system (these will be laminated as well and thrown in the same Raaco that the counters will be kept). Overall the overlay looks like it will fit in with the boards fine, with the terrain depictions as per pre-map pack boards. My only niggle is the stone wall is a little slim and does not stand out strongly but it's just that a niggle.

A bigger niggle but quite bearable is that you only get the two boat cards but three boat types. The third boat card is an example on the rear page of the rules. This I will scan, print and laminate. Not perfect but not a major issue.

The six pages of rules look clear and not tainted by the odd characters and typos as per HOB's Kreta module. They obviously cover the new squad type and their special abilities. Further rules cover the Motor Gun Boats (MGB) and the final 4 pages are a condensed set of the MGB rules which were originally were released in LFT's St. Nazaire module. Interestingly again further evidence that maybe the plans included further expansion as shown in the rules are images of Swedish and Russian boat crews. If this is the case let's hope that HOB do eventually release these products but word is they have just one more product to release before closing down (though restarting at a later date could be a possibility).

The counter sheet has the KüstenJäger squads, half squads, leaders and boat crews and the required British boat crews as well. Five boat counters are supplied with the required info counters for the various weapons. An interesting counter is the Reaction Platoon counter that is used in one of the six scenarios and covered in the rules. This counter represents a random force that is activated during the scenario. The counters are printed face up as per the normal convention which is a relief as HOB have a history of supplying back to front counters. Another fault from Kreta was the sizing of some of the counters. My squads from Kreta were so badly cut that some of the MMC were much wider than they should whilst the adjoining counter was substantially thinner leading to strange shaped counters and in my case a rather annoyed customer. This counter sheet suffers from the same poor cut but not to the same extent and can be lived with. The quality of the images is nice and crisp, and are the typical high shine finish which is a positive or negative dependant on your view. The counters are white core which will put a few off I am sure. Another possible issue for some is that the counters are side punched rather than edge punched which are harder to clean up (but I find easier to cut from the tree). Overall though I am fairly pleased with them.

The main bones of any pack though is the scenarios and weighing in at six scenarios it has to be said is on the light side. What you automatically get with these scenarios is extra rules to work with. Obviously you have the new MGB rules (though they are not used in every scenario), but to use the pun you also have a whole raft of other rules in many cases to deal with as well. It has to be assumed you have the whole ASL system and several other TPP items to get the full use out of the pack. Given that you only get six scenarios not having what is required for one or two scenarios would be a big issue!! But I feel the subject matter will only be truly attractive to those that already have a great deal of kit anyway.

Rule sections and other requirements needed to play include:-

Rules: Early Morning Sun blindness (F11.6), Huts (G5), Night Rules (E1.), Beech slopes (G13.22), Wooden Pier (G13.7), Ocean for deep and shallow, Olive Groves (F13.5), Vineyards (F13.6), Palm Debris (and counters).

Equipment: HOB/BFP High Ground boards, Ocean Overlays, Landing Craft, HOB SF I, Gavatu Island overlay (from the ASL Annual '93b).

So plenty of the less used kit and rules are required which sets this apart from other recent products and should be applauded.

SF-7 Deadly Appetici

Nice to see HOB supporting their previously released boards from High Ground (and recently re-released through BFP in their expanded pack). I don't think enough re-use happens with TPP boards. Here a combined Italian and British force has to fend off the Germans who attack early morning (Sun Blindness) and the usual Ocean and Beach overlays are in use. 8 turns makes this one on the long side but with a total of ten Allied squads vs. six attacking German the turns should click on.

SF-8 The Guns of Corfu

Plenty of use of overlays (six in total), a pier and night rules to get you started!!! The Germans get three Assault Boats and a Landing Craft. They are trying to establish the location of two Guns and face a very superior in numbers British force. Interesting SSR add plenty of flavour and the Reaction Platoon counter gets its outing. An interesting looking scenario.

SF-9 Now it's German

First scenario to use the MGBs and both sides get them! But the Brit one sets up HIP and can not move. Looks interesting but again HOB uses a previous release, this time ownership of SF I is required as rules and counters representing SBS (and SAS) are used. I am interested in how the battle between the Brit boat's 40L plus MGs and the German lesser MG only mounted boat goes.

SF-10 False Flag

Last of the four Steve Swan designs (all above) and this uses the old Annual map Gavatu Island. This has the Germans attacking Greeks with six Assault Boats and a captured British MGB. The German's have the tactical puzzle of attacking two separate islands and only six turns to do it in. Again another interesting design.

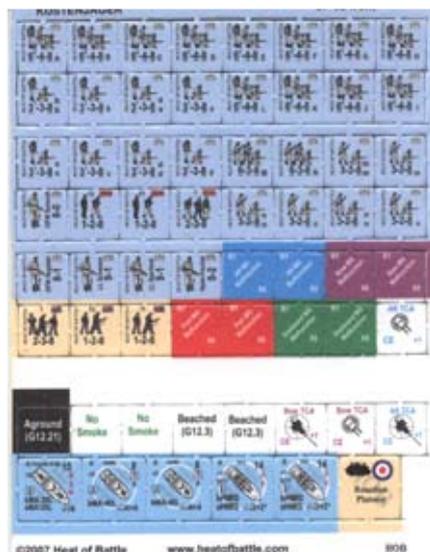

SF-11 Clash in the Night

This scenario is the first of the two by Robert Hammond. A second night scenario but this has the Germans on the defence and no MGB but they do have landing craft they need to defend. The Brits have a choice of three ways of winning. Looks an interesting scenario.

SF-12 Operation Polar Bear

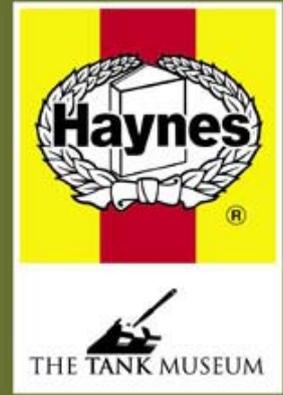

Germans back on the attack with Italians as the defenders. Another night scenario and again lacking the MGBs and again using the landing craft though these start beached. The overlay is used in this scenario and I can say the only pity is that it is the only scenario that uses it from the whole pack. Another interesting looking scenario.

So half the scenarios are played out at night (as should be expected given the troops method of getting to the fight), only two scenarios use the MGBs which is a big disappointment and I have to admit to being left wanting more from the pack. Obviously if all 6 scenarios are fun to play then it's worth it but I would have liked to see more scenarios and given the specific rules and components some who purchase it will have difficulty playing all of them.

TIGER TANK

Owners' Workshop Manual

Caring For Your Tiger

A Review of the latest Haynes Owner's Manual

Most people are probably familiar with Haynes' series of owner's manuals covering the maintenance and repair of a wide range of cars and bikes. In recent years they have expanded the range with a series of books on military vehicles and aircraft. Unlike the normal owner's manuals, these books does not offer detailed information on maintenance and repair but are more a general look at the vehicle covered.

The Tiger I tank is the subject of the latest book in the series, which has been produced in conjunction with the Bovington Tank Museum. Much of the book focuses on Tiger 131, the Tiger tank that is actually on display at the museum, and which has been restored to full working order over the past 20 years.

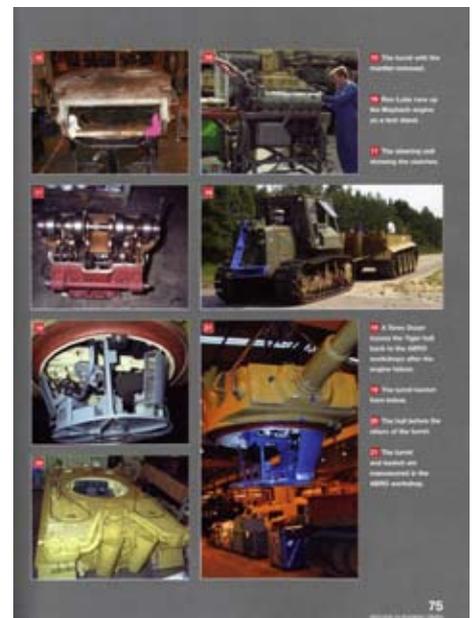

The introduction is written by Peter Gudgion, who was serving as a Lieutenant with 48th Royal Tank Regiment on 21 April 1943 when they captured Tiger 131. He was injured when his Churchill was knocked out by Tiger 131 just prior to its capture and after being shipped back to the UK was transferred to the School of Tank Technology as an examiner of captured equipment. In October 1943 Tiger 131 arrived at the school, and he was subsequently involved in the writing of the report on the tank that had nearly killed him!

The book opens with a look at the design history and production of the Tiger tank. Much of this will be familiar to anyone with an interest in the Tiger tank, but is none the less useful. After a general look, the book proceeds to focus on the history of Tiger 131, from its completion at the factory to its deployment in Tunisia, and subsequent capture by the British. This section is complete with two pages detailing the battle damage it suffered as it was captured, written by well-known *ASL*er David Schofield, in his professional role as lecturer in forensics and crime scene science – a side-effect of this is that he is now claiming to be a published author! Expect to be bored to death by him telling you this every time you play him in future :-). The section ends with a look at how the tank was then taken back to Britain and the work that was done on it in analysing it.

Chapter 3 offers a detailed look at the anatomy of the Tiger tank. This is lavishly illustrated with cutaway diagrams and numerous photos, many of them of Tiger 131 itself. The interior shots of the tank are particularly invaluable for modellers. Information is also included on the wading gear and submersion procedure used (theoretically; as the book notes, there is no evidence this was done in action) to cross deep rivers and water obstacles if no bridge capable of taking the Tiger's weight were available. There is also a detailed section on the production and application of Zimmerit, the paste the Germans developed to stop anti-tank magnetic mines being attached to their tanks, and how the process was applied to the restoration of a StuG III.

The next chapter details the work involved in restoring Tiger 131 to running order, and the difficulties this involved. Again it is accompanied by numerous photos of the restoration work. The book then looks at the mechanics of running a Tiger, covering everything from starting the engine to wheel and track maintenance. Chapter six is a detailed look at the Maybach engine used in the Tiger, again illustrated with numerous cutaway diagrams and colour component diagrams, and plenty of detailed information on the workings of the engine and related components such as the gearbox and fuel tanks.

Chapter 7 looks at the firepower of the Tiger tank, starting with the dreaded '88'. After noting the origins of the gun, there is some information of how the gun was mounted in the turret, and a substantial amount of information on its operation, including an article on the aiming and firing procedure – something to remember next time you make a TH DR with your tank! Also covered are the various types of ammunition used, accompanied by several diagrams detailing how the 92 rounds were stored in the tank.

The chapter ends with a look at the bow and co-axial MG mounted on the tank, and the small arms carried inside the tank (as standard, just a MP40 SMG – no panzerfausts!).

Having covered the running and fighting systems, chapter 8 looks at how the Tiger was used in combat. It opens with a brief look at the deployment of the Tiger in independent tank battalions and their organisation, and how this evolved in the early months of the tank's use. A brief look at the tactical use of the Tiger is followed by a detailed look at the Tiger's mobility at the strategic, operational, and battlefield level and the different problems each one poses. An interesting table compares the Tiger with the Sherman and T34/85, and shows that in many cases it was as mobile as both.

The Tiger was reputed to be unreliable, but the book notes once the initial problems had been worked out, operational availability of the Tiger was as good as the Panzer IV and better than the Panther. The section on repair and maintenance notes the German approach to repair differed from that of the Western Allies who could simply replace a worn out tank with a new one, whereas the limited German production meant that local repair was often the only option, especially in Russia and North Africa.

The section also includes numerous anecdotes from Tiger crew members which offer an interesting insight into what it was like to live, fight and die in the tank.

The ends with a look at the six surviving complete Tiger Is, and includes brief details of their whereabouts and how they came to be in their current state. The intriguingly title section "Buying a Tiger" is not, unfortunately, about buying your own but about the Japanese purchase of a Tiger I from the Germany in May 1943. They paid 645,000 Reichsmarks for the vehicle, and

	Tiger	Sherman M4 (mid-production)	T-34/85
Max speed	45km/h	38km/h	55km/h
Average road speed	40km/h	33km/h	47km/h

Radius cross country	110km	160km	200km
Turning radius	3.44m	18.6m	59d turns
Trench crossing	2.5m	2.25m	2.5m

Ground clearance	0.47m	0.42m	0.40cm
Ground pressure	0.735kg/cm ²	0.96kg/cm ²	0.85kg/cm ²
Power-to-weight ratio	12.3hp/ton	12hp/ton	15.6 hp/ton

an itemised breakdown from the invoice is included. The vehicle never left Germany due to shipping problems, and ultimately was 'loaned' back to the Germans.

One minor quibble would be the lack of scale diagrams of the Tiger, though there are plenty of other books on the Tiger which can provide these for anyone who needs them.

Overall this a great book, well worth buying. The recommended retail price is £19.99, but it can be found for less; for example it is available on www.amazon.co.uk for £12.48. A link can be found on the VFTT website at www.vftt.co.uk/amazon.asp, along with links to a range of other military books of interest to readers.

ON THE CONVENTION TRAIL

There are more and more ASL tournaments cropping up all over the world. In fact, it is possible to be involved in an ASL tournament at least once a month, often more, if you were so inclined (and had the financial means to live such a life - I wish!).

If you plan on holding an ASL tournament, please let me know and I'll include the details here, space permitting.

If you contact anyone regarding these tournaments, please tell them that I sent you!

NOVEMBER Grenadier 2011

When: 10 – 13 November.

From Heimbach you need to take a taxi to Hergarten which is about 6 Kilometers. The location offers sleeping rooms nearly 60 persons, a huge kitchen (where our Marketenderin Andrea will continue her cooking business for us), a big playing area and an additional separate big room which we will use for eating. HEROES 2012

ADVANCED SQUAD LEADER TOURNAMENT

8TH - 11TH MARCH (THURSDAY THROUGH SUNDAY) 2012

HOTEL SKYE, SOUTH PROMENADE, BLACKPOOL, ENGLAND

THE EVENT

Following its success in previous years HEROES continues in 2012 to fill the gap for UK ASL action in the first half of the year. As normal the action starts on Thursday and continues through to Sunday so you can play in an ASL tournament and/or play friendly games (or even try your hand at a campaign game if you can find an opponent). The focus of the weekend will be the main tournament, in which players of like record are paired off to allow us to determine the winners - depending on numbers attending there will be four or five rounds. The first round will start on Friday afternoon and each round sees players choose from three carefully selected scenarios. Main tournament entrants are to be familiar with the rules through to the first half of Chapter G.

BOOT CAMP

Don't worry if you are a new player (someone who has only ever played five or fewer games against a live opponent), as a special tournament based on the ASL Starter Kit will be available on Friday. You can learn the game with an experienced player nearby to offer advice on rules. There will never be a better time to try your hand at ASL!

Remember, you can also drop in just for part of a day if you can't make it for the full weekend.

THE VENUE

The Hotel Skye is familiar to those who have attended in the past and offers plenty of gaming room for the whole weekend, Meals and good beer are also available in the hotel, and numerous alternative food outlets are close by. The hotel is easily accessible from the M55 and the train station is a 5 minute walk away.

Bed and breakfast is just £31 per person per night for a shared room or £34 for a single room per night.

THE COST

The weekend, whether you enter a tournament or just play games with the people you will meet, is fantastic value at only £15.00, or just £10.00 if you register before the beginning of March 2012.
